There is always a ray of some kind somewhere. Yesterday, while the price of call money went up like a bounding chamois from six to nine per cent, the price of export copper rose to 18¼ cents. Domestic delivery 18 cents, highest price since 1920.

Chain stores continue to make individual store owners pensive.

Twenty-four chain store systems show that in January this year they increased their sales on the aggregate 22.7 per cent over January, 1928. Twenty-two stores in one month sold $74,323,746 worth of goods.

Dr. Huebener, professor of insurance at the University of Pennsylvania, says American lives will soon be worth about six times as much as the total national property, real estate, industries and everything else.

He says the unnecessary death of adults now cost United States three billion dollars a year.

Every intelligent business man knows that the man who runs the property is as important as the property itself.

What would the old Standard Oil Company have been without John D. Rockefeller, or the Ford Company without Henry Ford?

The Vatican rejoices in the agreement made with Mussolini's government. Payment of $105,000,000, the added territory, the right to coin money, even the probability that many cardinals and archbishops will be appointed members of the Italian senate are less important than the fact that the pope will no longer remain a prisoner in the Vatican.

Mussolini, who thinks highly of Napoleon, also an Italian, agrees with Napoleon that a state to be firmly established requires "a spiritual gendarmerie," spiritual as well as military soldiers.

William Hauke of Chicago murdered Isabelle Scheckley before Illinois adopted the electric chair idea. So William Hauke must be hanged next week. Four other murderers waiting their turn will go to join Hauke by the electric route.

Illinois would give a better imitation of civilization, if, instead of changing from the gallows to the electric chair, degrading science by making it a public executioner, a change had been made from the gallows to life imprisonment, with no capital punishment.

Learning that Uncle Sam will build fifteen cruisers, his cousin, John Bull, decides to build two of them. This pleases everybody.

Great Britain and the United States are not going to fight. Their interests are about the same. They want a peaceful world in which to live and grow prosperous. The better prepared each one is the safer the other will be.

Combines Make For Tough Grain

Canadian Press

ASSINIBOIA, Sask., Feb. 9.—Use of the new method of cutting and threshing wheat with combines, in the opinion of V. G. King, Mossbank, farmer, expressed before the Saskatchewan royal grain commission here Friday, makes for tough grain and added that if the mechanical device is used as widely next season as last fall, when the crop was delivered almost in 30 days, will be repeated annually. The witness predicted that interior elevators will have to be constructed near the centres of farming sections in large numbers. Mr. King represented the local U.F.C. branch in presenting several resolutions.

Two fire alarms were recieved overnight, both of them being for minor occurrences and the men out only a few minutes in each case.

GOV'T. HOPES ALBERTA WILL ACCEPT OFFER

All Correspondence in Natural Resources Deal is Tabled

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—Tabled in the House of Commons at the request of Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., leader of the opposition, all the documens dealing with the question of the return of the natural resources to the prairie provinces were made public on Friday afternoon.

The offer of the federal government to the province of Alberta, made in December last year, following a conference with Premier J. E. Brownlee in Ottawa, is set forth at length and is declared by the prime minister to be "not subject to further modification by correspondence."

The terms of the offer as outlined in a letter from Premier Mackenzie King to Premier Brownlee are as follows:

"It is proposed to transfer to Alberta the natural resources in their entirety, with the exception of those areas now set apart for park purposes.

"With regard to mineral rights in national parks within the province, it is proposed to place Alberta on the same footing as the other provinces of the dominion.

School Lands Fund

"With respect to the school lands trust fund, and the school lands, it is proposed that these shall pass to the administration of the province, but shall be set aside and continue to be administered for the support of schools organized and carried on therein, in accordance with the laws of the province, but in compliance with the letter and spirit of the constitution.

"Following the transfer to Alberta of the natural resources, it is proposed to continue to pay to Alberta the present annual subsidy in lieu of lands of $562,500, with the understanding that increases in the subsidy as provided

UNION DEPOT POSSIBILITY IN EDMONTON

Conferences Between Authorities and Railway Officials On

That a union depot may be seen at Edmonton in the not distant future is the purport of a message to the Bulletin from K. A. Blatchford, M.P. for East Edmonton.

Conferences have taken place with railway offifcials, states the member, the outcome of which is highly promising, and there is every reason to believe that the union depots both at Edmonton and Calgary will soon become concrete facts.

It will be recalled that he outlined the proposals for union depots in the two cities before leaving Edmonton recently for Ottawa. They were heartily endorsed by local organizations, and also by the Hon. Charles Stewart, to whom they were referred, and who added that he would use every effort to secure agreement on the part of the railroads. In regard to Edmonton the feature is stressed that now northern lines will be jointly operated the union depot is almost in the light of a necessity

It is pointed out that a depot large enough to accommodate both railways would be an imposing addition to Edmonton's buildings and would centralize and consolidate the existing down town district.

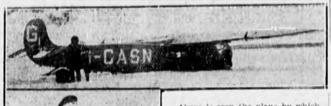
"Punch" Dickins and His Disabled Plane



Above is seen the plane by which "Punch" Dickins made his daring flights with mail into the north of Alberta a few moments after it had crashed after hitting a ridge on the ice at Fort Resolution. The picture clearly shows the body of the plane resting on the ice, the under-carriage wiped off by the force of the blow. Below is seen "Punch" Dickins on the left, holding the crumpled all metal propeller. His mechanic on the left, and "Rags" Wilson, well-known northerner who was a passenger.

ALBERTA COAL IN ONTARIO TO BE LABELLED

Rigid Regulations in Eastern Province Will Prevent Fraud

"Cases of substitution have occurred in Ontario whereby inferior coals have been sold as Alberta coal, and the proposed Act is highly satisfactory inasmuch as it protects Alberta operators, and also reflects the good will of the Ontario government towards this province," declared Howard Stutchbury, Alberta Trade Commissioner, referring to the Act now before the Ontario house. The Act, if passed, will compel Ontario dealers to state the place of origin of coal sold by them as Alberta coal.

Mr. Stutchbury, who has just received a copy of the Act, pointed out that the province of Alberta now has a Coal Sales Act which deals with shipments from the Alberta end, and insists upon proper descriptions and trade names being given on every shipping bill and invoice accompanying coal sent out from a mine or by dealers. This regulation also covers the sale of coal produced outside but sold within the province.

The Ontario statute would have been put through last year had not the Ontario session been on the point of closing before the Alberta Coal Standards Board was formed.

The Act has now passed second reading, and every bill, weigh-ticket, invoice and sale note used in connection with the sale of coal must state the area of production and the Alberta trade name. In the case of the last mentioned, any person or agent who infringes the regulations is liable to a penalty of not less than $20 or more than $200, or three months imprisonment. This applies more specifically to retail merchants and dealers, and anyone making a false statement in the publication of such details is liable to a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500, or to imprisonment not exceeding six months.

Immigrants From Europe To Increase

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Feb. 9. — Immigrants from Continental Europe in 1929 would probably be double the number which the western provinces had indicated would be necessary for farm work, Hon. Robert Forke stated in an address before the Y.M.C.A. here today. The recent restriction on the number of immigrants brought to Canada under the railways agreement would reduce the amount to one-third of last year's total but there would still be a greater influx than could be comfortably absorbed.

The department's complaint was that the railways were bringing out larger numbers than the demand indicated.

KING REACHES HEALTH HAVEN AT SEASHORE

Thousands Waiting Outside of Palace See Monarch Depart

Associated Press Cable

BOGNOR, Sussex, England, Feb. 9—King George, slowly recovering from the long seige of illness which has stricken him, was safely removed to Craigwell house, near here, today, in order to benefit from the sea breeze.

His Majesty left Buckingham Palace at 10:34 a.m. in a special ambulance and reached Craigwell House just two hours and fifty minutes later.

Queen Mary was on hand to receive her husband. She travelled from Buckingham Palace by a shorter route.

As the ambulance reached the cross roads at Aldwick, a big crowd gave His Majesty a quiet greeting and the king again waved his hand before the car disappeared from view.

It is understood that the king bore the journey fairly well and was not unduly fatigued.

Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewitt examined the king on his arrival and probably will issue a bulletin later in the day.

With the arrival of His Majesty, the court has now been re-established at Aldwick.

LONDON, Feb. 9—King George today left the room where he has lain ill since late in last November, to undertake a motor trip to a home by the seashore at Bognor, Sussex, where he hoped to regain his health.

Thousands waited outside Buckingham palace for a sight of the ruler who at stages of his illness was very near death's door. Their wait and hopes were rewarded when, through the raised blinds on each side of the

Says British Papers Giving False Reports

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9. — The British press was charged yesterday by Chairman Britten of the house naval committee, with having broadcast false reports relative to proposed curtailment of the British warship building program while congress was considering the cruiser construction bill.

"During the past six years," Britten said, "whenever the congress was considering increases for the American navy, it has been customary for the British press to broadcast the intention of Great Britain to slow up on her building programs.

"Just as soon, however, as our cruiser bill is passed and out of the way, along comes the first lord of the admiralty with the admission that warship building must continue."

Viking Field Dry States Manager Of Edmonton Company

Glen Ruby of Hudson's Bay-Marland Oil Co., Says Deep Well Test Abandoned at 3,040 Feet—Only Gas Produced

There is no oil in the Viking field.

This was the statement made to the Bulletin Saturday by Glen Ruby, manager of the Hudson's Bay Marland Oil company. Mr. Ruby announced that the company had abandoned work on the deep test well at a depth of 3040 feet. This means, he explained that the limestone formations had been penetrated 600 feet without encountering either oil or gas. Gas however had been struck higher up above the line and was being disposed of to the Northwestern Utilities.

The Hudson's Bay Marland Oil company will now drill a new well three quarters of a mile east of the abandoned drillings and both wells will be kept as gas producers.

"This," stated Mr. Ruby, "indicates that there is very little or no chance of oil or gas being found in the Viking field below the limestone, the formation which usually produces crude oil. It was the deepest test made in this part of the province," Mr. Ruby continued, referring to the abandoned drilling "and is conclusive enough."

Lime, he stated was struck at 2442 feet and drilling was continued for 600 feet. The well will be cemented back.

Labor Member Finds Lawrence Man Of Parts

Ernest Thurtle Impressed by Personality of Free Lance Who Has Intrigued the International World of Diplomacy

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—A special cable to the Mail and Empire from London, says:

"Many questions have been asked by skeptical Laborites concerning the activities on the Afghan frontier, preceding and during the present hostilities of the famous Colonel Lawrence, now aircraftsman Shaw. Shaw's trip home on leave and his removal from a liner at Plymouth in an admiralty launch, with the subsequent chase by reporters, has been chronicled.

"When a man in the blue uniform of an air force private turned up at the house of commons and succeeded in sending his card to Ernest Thurtle, Labor M.P., who had asked questions about his activities, Thurtle was at first skeptical as to his identity. Labor M.P.'s had labored for days to convince Saklatvala, lone Communist in the house, that Lawrence himself, and not his dummy, as alleged by Moscow, had been sent home.

"However, Thurtle found it was really Lawrence, and he and Jimmy Maxton, Clyde extremist, took him to a private room and talked for two hours, after which Lawrence disappeared.

"Thurtle said: 'Colonel Lawrence is a man of such attractive personality and so exceptionally gifted, that if I were in charge of the secret service and wanted a man to take risks and to get out of a most impossible position, I should regard him as the ideal man. Despite that, I quite definitely formed the impression that he is not the super-spy of popular imagination, nor had he any desire to fill that role.'"

PEACE MOVE ENDS IN FIGHT BOMBAY CITY

Hindus Are Killed and Retaliation Parties Are Organized

Associated Press

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 9—Rioting was resumed in this city today, the seventh successive day of the disturbances.

Groups of Moslems lay in wait inside streets of the bazaar and mill districts to slay solitary Hindus.

Four murders of this sort were reported. Hindus organized retaliation parties.

In the native quarter all business was suspended. Tram car service was discontinued and there were few taxis to be seen.

A peace parade of Mohammedans, Pathans and Hindus Friday night broke up into mobs of fighting men and the sixth successive day resulted in carnage.

Although the new casualty list is not yet complete, the death toll stands above fifty, with more than 400 wounded.

An official statement says that 80 mills and railway work shops were in operation, but that tram service was disorganized. The situation continues very serious and it is feared that further trouble may be expected.

As far as could be ascertained, the casualties between Friday noon and Saturday noon were 35 killed and 193 injured.

At the suggestion of the municipal authorities, the governor ordered liquor shops to be closed immediately, while well-known rough characters were rounded up by the police. All gatherings were dispersed and greater military forces were employed.

Associated Press

SEATTLE, Feb. 9.—Following the refusal of Justice Court to require bail of Dr. Royal B. Tracey, Prosecutor Ewing D. Colvin Friday filed new manslaughter charges against the nerve specialist in superior court, asking $2,000 bond.

The new charges assert that Dr. Tracey was in "a state of intoxication" when he mistakingly gave ammonia to Ella Viola Fallis, young stenographer, formerly of Edmonton, Alta., at a party here January 26.

John F Dore, defense attorney, said that the $2,000 bond would be posted when the warrant for Dr. Tracey's arrest is served Saturday. Prosecutors had asked for $5,000 bail when charges were filed in justice court.

The accused physician denied that he was intoxicated or that he had taken a drink on the day he treated the Fallis girl.

In the centre, above, is seen H. P. Rocke, who will continue as manager of the Trudeau Dyeing and Cleaning plant. The two, who recently purchased the Trudeau plant, have long experience in the cleaning and dyeing business.

Documents Asked For In Transfer Of Natural Resources

A. L. Groux, Liberal, Grouard, has asked the government for a return of all correspondence and documents between the government, minister or employe thereof, with the Dominion government or any minister thereof in connection with the transfer of natural resources.

In addition he has asked for correspondence between the government, minister or employe thereof, and any person in respect to the return of the resources, and copies of the legal opinion received by the government on the same subject.

Mr. Giroux has also asked what steps the government has taken to drill test wells for domestic water in the districts of Falher, Spirit River and McLennan, and if any investigation as to soil and geological stratas in the above-mentioned districts has been set under way.

BETTING MEN AGAINST GOV'T.

Organizing as Opponents Toward Ruling Party on Taxation

By HENRY SOMERVILLE
Special Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin (Copyrgiht)

LONDON, Feb. 9—Bishop Auckland makes the third by-election won by the Labor party in quick succession and it is natural for Ramsay MacDonald to claim they show a change of the nation's mind since the general election of 1924. Bishop Auckland, as a coal mining centre, was a safe Labor seat, but South Battersea was considered safely Conservative.

Sir Thomas Inskip, the Attorney-General, replied to Mr. MacDonald by saying that a few preliminary skirmishes did not mean the end of the war, and victory did not always go to those who won the first round. Mr. Amery is bitterly blaming the Liberals for having given South Battersea to the Laborites.

It has been discovered in recent by-elections that government candidates have suffered by the unpopularity of the betting tax. Bookmakers have been organizing their forces and it is expected that Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will announce dropping of the betting tax in the near future.

MANILA, Feb. 9.—The steamer Illyria, which left Boston, Mass., last October, carrying a number of scientists bound for the South Sea Islands, has not been heard from since January 12. Insular customs authorities here have received a message from the United States embassy at Tokyo asking aid in locating the vessel.

Spedden District Is Very Prosperous

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

SPEDDEN, Alta., Feb. 9.—One of the results of increasing prosperity among the farming communities tributary to Spedden is that quite a number of farmers spend the week-end at the hotel here, thus effecting a refreshing break in the winter monotony of farm life. There is always a week-end entertainment of one kind or another in one or another of Spedden's spacious halls. To meet new friends and renew old friendships are interesting events especially to people who live long distances from towns, and the week-enders feel like being on a holiday.

For some time past the Spededn stores have been drawing the custom of farmers from Vilna side, and recently a number of people from the Ashmont side are doing their shopping here. These facts account for the increased volume of business done in Spededn now as compared with a few years ago.

Isaac Stern returned from Edmonton a few days ago with the blue prints of a large store he intends to build next spring.

Mrs. Browne, the postmistress here will enlarge the office and telephone booth as soon as weather permits.

A few travellers are still arriving here by automobile from Edmonton. They say the roads are quite good.

WESTERN DEBATERS

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—Three debaters from western Canada universities will meet a McGill team here Wednesday on the subject: "Resolved; that this house is opposed to all forms of censorship." The western team will be Bryce Mackenzie, of the University of Saskatchewan; W. J. Masteron of the University of British Columbia, and Nelson Chappel, of the University of Alberta. McGill will be represented by A. M. Klein, J. Jeffries and F. V. Stone. The visitors will meet University of Montreal debaters on Friday next.

MANY CHANGES WILL BE MADE TRUDEAU PLANT

Improvements Projected in Various Departments of Dry Cleaning Concern

"Considerable additions to the mechanical end of the dry cleaning department will be made by the new owners of Trudeau's Ltd., according to G. L. MacKenzie, of the Pantorium Dye Works, which company has purchased the property and plant, it being estimated that these alterations will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

As well as the additions to the dry cleaning plant, alterations to the offices are being carried out, and extra rest rooms will be provided for the accommodation of the staff.

A considerable amount of money will be spent in the installation of a complete ventilation system which will greatly benefit the health of the employes of the firm.

When the alterations have been completed this plant will be the best equipped in Western Canada, if not in the Dominion.

With the addition to the plant in the dry cleaning department, the new owners will be in a position to give their former patrons a greatly increased and better service than they have enjoyed, and will also guarantee the prompt delivery of goods to both town and country customers.

The standard of work that will be turned out by the new equipment will be of greater excellence than that of the old plant.

The head office of the company will be established in Edmonton, and although the Trudeau plant will form a subsidiary of the Pantorium Dye Works of Canada, Ltd., all the business in connection with the chain of dry cleaning and dyeing plants will be conducted from this city.

It is the intention of the company to acquire other plants in Western Canada in the near future, all of which will be operated through the Edmonton office.

Something to Think Out If Interested in the Cause and Cure of Disease

DR. JOHN F. HARRIS, Pioneer Chiropractor

In common with thousands of other chiropractors, I have known of innumerable cases of Bright's disease, diabetes, mellitus, cancer, tuberculosis, syphillis, pernicious anemia, Pott's disease, intussusception, hydrocephalus, phimosis, locomotor ataxia, transverse melitis, arterio-sclerosis, abscesses of all kinds, cataract, glaucoma, diphtheria, acute appendicitis, spinal arthritis, etc., which have gone to them, where Chiropractic principles and practices have been exclusively used, and these cases have gotten well. This, in itself is proof of the correctness of not only the principle, but also the development of correct use within the men themselves who have correctly applied the correct principles to human beings. I have also known many of these same types of cases to go to other "chiropractors", who have failed to use these Chiropractic principles and practices, and any and all of them have failed to get well. The first group would, naturally, say that Chiropractic was of service to those types of cases. The second group would, naturally, say that Chiropractic had its limitations and was of no value to any or all of the above mentioned cases.

I would say that if your experience with Chiropractic has been unsatisfactory you have met with an unsuccessful Chiropractor whose application is unsuccessful, or you have not been faithful in taking your adjustments regularly or long enough for natural adaptation to take place. FOR when the PRINCIPLE IS CORRECT IN ONE disease it must be in all diseases as it is governed by the laws of nature—and you cannot expect something miraculous from one treatment or twenty. How can you when the principle is governed by a natural law and not subject to control by your mode of reasoning or anyone else's. Then you have to abide by the time nature requires to accomplish health in that particular case—you cannot expect favors from a source of Power that is beyond human control.

How many of these prize-winners at Edmonton's first fair are still living in Alberta, or anywhere in the west? How many of those who attended that first Edmonton exhibition, held in two rooms of the old Hudson Bay Fort, are still here? How many of these articles of fancy work, etc., are still to be found in the homes of the exhibitors or their descendants?

This list of prize-winners, whose winnings, it is recorded, totalled the sum of $173, is a roll of names which have been and are household words in the older settlements of the Edmonton district. Their children, grand-children, and great-grandchildren number hundreds, perhaps thousands, and include many of the best known residents of the city and of the "settlements" in which these pioneers pulled the stumps, reared the first log cabins, and broke the virgin sod.

This prize-list bridges the gap of the half-century which separates the first Edmonton fair from that which is to be held this summer. What more appropriate than that the outstanding feature of this year's fair should be made a grand gathering of the pioneers and their descendants, in recognition that the founding of the Edmonton exhibition was by no means the least important service these hardy fore-runners of civilization contributed to the opening up and development of the wilderness that has become a prosperous and progressive province?

Edmonton has an opportunity to stage a celebration this year which will be unique and distinctive among western fairs. No other centre in the "Northwest Territories" can commemorate this year the semi-centennial of its first exhibition. The fair held in Edmonton in 1879 was the first agricultural show ever held in the region which is now comprised in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta.

This opportunity should arouse an [illegible] response from the Exhibition [illegible], the Old Timers' Association, [illegible] the Provincial Government, and the Dominion department of agriculture. All that agricultural shows have meant in the development of these two provinces was given its start when a handful of the original settlers in this district, with their wives, met in the old fort on the site of the present parliament buildings fifty years ago to make friendly competition and comparison of the fruits of their labors in a new land.

The fiftieth anniversary of that event presents Edmonton with the greatest chance that ever offered for making the coming fair "bigger and better" than any that has gone.

A Dreary Drama

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I sat me through a dreary play,
  Built up without a smile,
In which no one was heard to say
  A single word worth while.
Through several acts a woman whined
That happiness she couldn't find,
A woman selfish, sordid, mean,
Willful and woefully unclean.

This right to happiness, thought I,
  Which dramatists exclaim
And fancy no law should deny
  And no man dare to blame,
This tragical and thread-bare theme
Appears to me a moron's dream,
The idea being that one should be
From every law and duty free.

One should be happy, though he kill
  The dearest friend he knows,
One should not know one moment ill,
  Or pay one debt he owes.
Women their husbands should betray
If but their minds shall run that way.
Life owes no duty, be it said
Either to living or to dead.

I shed no tears that dreary night
  O'er such a woman's pain,
I had no pity for her plight,
  Save thinking her insane.
And when I quit that place, I said:
"Sob on, old girl, until you're dead!
If you've a right to happiness
Then life would be a sordid mess."

Clothes

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I am an assiduous reader of all the departments of the newspaper and have just read an article by somebody about the ideal wardrobe for a school girl.

It is a good article and advises against fussy clothes.

But it does not go far enough.

Why should not the clothes problem be entirely eliminated as far as school girls are concerned? They will have plenty of time to think about clothes after school is over.

The more I reflect upon the the problem the more sensible seems to me to be the suggestion that all school children wear uniforms. Some durable and sensible frock should be prescribed and thus the entire matter of clothing should be eliminated.

There should be no sport clothes, nor dress clothes, nor other clothes than the usual uniform.

The article suggests five kinds of dresses.

A topcoat of tan tweed trimmed with collar or nutria, a jacket costume of navy blue with slip-on sweater in blues, a pleated skirt to match the jumper making the third costume.

A one-piece simple wool crepe frock, belted and a two-piece jumper frock of jersey in two tones of blue, green or brown and beige.

Besides this a girl should have for her out-of-class social activities a dressy coat of cloth or velvet or fur for afternoon or evening, a dark, long-sleeved afternoon dress of crepe satin or velvet and an evening dress of satin, taffeta or chiffon.

How much simpler it would be to have a prescribed costume that every girl must wear and cut out the whole business.

Two kinds of competition I never could endure. One kind is competition in girls' dresses and the other kind is competition in tombstones. Why should people compete during the formative period of life, enabling those who have plenty of money to dress better than those who do not, and why should people compete after they are dead by erecting elaborate mausoleums.

Certainly if democracy is a good thing it ought to rule in childhood and after death. Let the grown people parade and spread all they please, but save the young and the dead.

There are certain schools which permit nothing but a uniform and these are to be commended.

Health and Diet Advice

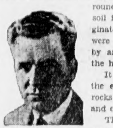
By DR. FRANK McCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulleain

FROM THE DUST OF THE GROUND

"And Jehovah God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Most of us do not realize that this is still true. The elements composing our bodies are actually found in the minerals of the earth and the gasses surrounding it. In other words, the food we eat is the soil from which the body grows. All of our food originates from the crude elements of the earth which were first refined by vegetable life, and perhaps later by animal life, before becoming delicate enough for the human digestion.



Frank McCoy

It is impossible, at the present time, to determine the exact difference between the iron found in the rocks and the iron found in such vegetables as spinach and celery, but there is some subtle difference.

There have been many attempts by doctors in the past to feed the crude elements such as iron, calcium, iodine, etc., to human beings as medicine and food, and although the reports are somewhat conflicting, it is quite evident that these minerals must first be organized by the vegetable kingdom before they can be converted into a healthy cell structure within the human body.

The millions of small root-like villi of the small intestines are roots for sucking up the nourishment out of the vegetable and animal food, and the blood passing through these villi carries the nutrition to all parts of the body.

The plant must remain in one place and send its roots in search of food, but the human being and most animals are endowed with the ability to move from place to place in search of food. All of the higher animals really carry along their root system internally.

Since the body is built from the food which is eaten, it is necessary that the best be selected. The elements of which the body is composed are as follows: oxygen, carbon, hydrogen, notrogen, calcium, phosphorus, chlorin, iron, manganese, iodine, aluminum, arsenic and copper. Each of these seems to be essential to life, although the exact use of the last three has not been fully determined. Practically all of these elements are found in every food as it is found in nature, but, of course, some foods are richer in one element, and others are richer in another element.

Each element plays some special part in the growth or function of the body, some build into hair, some nerves, some bone, and some are used to produce energy. If any element is not supplied to the body in sufficient quantity, a disease or weakness is sure to result.

A short time ago I prepared two articles showing the foods richest in the different mineral elements and their uses in the body. I will be pleased to send these articles to anyone who is interested, upon receipt of a large self-addressed stamped envelope.

Question: Miss A. B. writes: "Seven months ago I was the victim of an automobile accident from which I suffered a fracture of the skull and cheek bone, and am now recovering from a nervous breakdown. Can a person marry who has had a skull fracture?"

Answer: If you have recovered from the skull fracture, I do not see how it would interfere with your marriage. If seven months have elapsed since the accident, there is very little danger that you will have any further trouble.

Question: Mrs. J. asks: "Is Melba toast made of white of whole wheat bread?"

Answer: Melba toast is made by thoroughly dextrinizing thin dry slices of white bread. Real whole wheat bread becomes somewhat bitter if thououghly toasted. If the whole wheat bread is only partially toasted it has a much better flavor and can then be used at any meal where starch is permissible. Those in good health can generally use the whole wheat toast with the ordinary breakfast of eggs and stewed fruit.

Question: Mrs. A. Mc. writes: "Will you please tell me through the newspaper column if it is possible to reduce the hips from 39 to about 35½ inches, and if so, how? Also, please tell me how to distill water."

Answer: The best way to reduce the hips is to take long walks each day. There are no calisthenic exercises you can take which will take the place this kind of exercise received through walking. It is impracticable to distill water in your own home, but you can do so if you purchase a small still which you can buy in a chemical supply store. It is much cheaper to buy distilled water by the bottle, as it sells for about fifty cents for a five gallon bottle.

New Brunswick's contribution to Uncle Sam's Yuletide celebration included some 3,000,000 Christmas trees—the greatest number ever shipped from the province.

CHARACTER CLOSE-UPS

NARROW, HEAVY EYEBROWS SHOW THAT THIS SUBJECT INSISTS ON HAVING HIS OWN WAY

Astrology

Planetary Influences on This Day for All.

For Those Whose Birthday Is Today

If you were born on February 9, you have a conservative nature, are studious and show forethought. Cultivation is essential to your best interests. It is necessary that you constantly seek a goal somewhat difficult to attain, as you require inspiration. There is a keen love of justice, but it is necessary that you realize human idiosyncrasies and avoid being overly critical. Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with politics, the military, law, navigation, literature, mechanical engineering, salesmanship, finance, etc. The most favorable periods for accepting anything reasonable in nature, where beneficial results are required are the winter of 1929 and the year 1930.

George Ade—Born February 9, 1866

An example of a person born on February 9 is George Ade, well-known author and humorist, whose horoscope indicates a versatile, scintillating intellect and a keen sense of humor. This is a lovable personality, with an unusual understanding of the idiosyncrasies of human nature, and an appreciation of the fine arts.

Others born on this date are William Henry Harrison, ninth President of the United States; Sir Anthony Hope, author of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, celebrated English actress.

SUNDAY

If you were born on February 10, you have a keen understanding of the value of justice, and should avoid permitting so-called mishaps to prejudice your career. Should you find yourself hampered and opposed, it would be beteer to seek other channels than to attempt to over-ride these vicissitudes. Through tenacious adherence success will be attained. Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with literature, publications, politics, inventions, engineering, railroading, mining, etc. The most favorable periods for attempting anything reasonable in nature, where beneficial result is required, are the spring and winter of 1929, the spring of 1930, the spring of 1932, and the year 1936.

William Allen White, Born February 10, 1868

An example of a person born on February 10 is William Allen White, noted Kansas author and journalist, whose horoscope indicates an active, fertile mind combined with insight and penetration, as evidenced by his fecund and versatile pen. His is an optimistic, aggressive personality, allied with rare mental alertness.

Other persons born on this day are Charles Lamb, well-known English essayist, and Alexandre Millerand, former President of the French Republic.

Planetary Conditions for Tomorrow, February 11

Favorable for finances, and for any work requiring courage.

Keeping Mentally Fit

By Joseph Jastrow, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D.

Professor of Psychology, University of Wisconsin, 1888 to 1917; now professor emeritus; lecturer in the New School for Social Research, New York City; past president of the American Phychological Association.

It is with keen anticipation that I read your articles on psychology. They always give me pleasure and knowledge, for they sound as do the writings of a master in that field. Being as you might say, a psychological case, I have a problem, which with your kind indulgence, I will endeavor to lay before you.

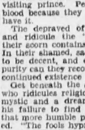
Since about the age of 6 I have stammered. I acquired this habit at that age by associating with a child who had this defect. I am now more than 29 and for a few years an overwhelming desire has risen within me to throw off this pernicious habit, which has retarded me so much. I have studied, experimented and thought about my condition for many a long hour, and have read many books on the subject. The conclusion that I have reached is that my condition is purely mental in that my vocal apparatus is normal, for when all alone I can speak normally and fluently.

Now, several years ago, I read an article of an attorney who had impediment in speech and who cured himself of it. Being so successful, he organized a club to which the only qualification for admission was that the applicant stammer. Regular meetings were held at which gathering members were required to address the assemblage, no matter how little was said, until gradually they acquired the confidence they so badly needed—the feeling they were able to speak normally. When cured of this curse, they were required to resign their membership.

I have been trying for some time to locate this organization, but so far have been unsuccessful. I thought that you might perchance know about it, or perhaps might suggest to me some way out of this difficulty. A. S.

Reply

Does any one know the address of this or any other Stammerer's Club? If so, send it on. It's a good idea: good, that so far as many (whether most or not I don't know) stammerers get nervous and feel themselves inferior in the presence of those who speak freely, because part of their feeling is that the person addressed is aware of the handicap and annoyed by it; they lose this feeling in the presence of fellow-stammerers.



If the effect were more generally the other way and stutterers infected one another, then the club would lose its purpose. But this is not the rule and so it is hardly correct to say that a child of 6 acquired the habit by associating with another child who stammered. That happens to be an age at which many children begin to stutter; some slightly and lose it soon others decidedly and have great trouble in throwing it off. Temporary stuttering in children 2 to 4 years old is also observed.

Children with a tendency to stutter many have that tendency brought forward by the very fear of stuttering like that stuttering child. On the other hand, if I attended a meeting of the Stutter and Stammer Club I might feel like tripping in speech myself but it would be a mere passing effect. Since the majority of the stutterers are nervous, with their nervousness coming out through the most sensitive social medium of expression we have, speech, they stutter most when ill at ease and least when most at ease. In this case, when alone, with no social situation, stuttering disappears.

This doesn't mean that "nervous" persons should be encouraged to associate with other "nervous" persons (though they frequently drift that way); there are all sorts of "nevrousness," and some are contaminating if not contagious, but steammering differs in this: that it reveals itself.

The rule is rather to encourage nervous people to associate with those in whose presence they more readily lose or reduce their "nervousness;" and that is quite as likely to be those of opposite temperament. All of us show something of the same variation, being at our best with those sympathetic to us and ill at ease with those who arouse our weaker points. As a fact, we join our several clubs to release the best sides of our social nature.

Robert Quillen Says—

The fox, being unable to reach the grapes, consoled himself with the reflection that they probably were sour.

Modern psychologists, looking beneath the surface to discover the hidden motives that prompt us, find most of our opinions formed in the same manner.

We jeer at the thing we covet in vain.

In a land of theoretical equality, people jeer at royalty and ridicule the nobility. The degree of their sincerity may be measured by the fact that the police reserves are called out to keep the awe-stricken mob from mauling a visiting prince. People jeer at royal blood because they want it and can't have it.

The depraved of both sexes curse and ridicule the "goody good," but their scorn contains a note of pathos. In their shamed, sad hearts they long to be decent, and only by jeering at purity can they reconcile themselves to continued existence without it.

Get beneath the surface of a cynic who ridicules religion and you find a mystic and a dreamer embittered by his failure to find the peace of God that more humble people have achieved. "The fools hypnotize themselves," says he. But he means to say: "I have searched for it in vain. Since I couldn't find it, it must be a delusion peculiar to the simple."

We jeer at politicians who rank as minor gods and ridicule the people who applaud them, but we do it because we covet praise, also, and get none of it.

We jeer at the manners and extravagances of the new rich because we yearn in vain for money enough to live as they live.

We jeer at grand opera and mock those who delight in ancient paintings and thus we conceal our resentment of the fact that we haven't the capacity to appreciate such things.

When we are young we jeer at the discretion of age because we are conscious of being foolish, and when we are old we denounce the joys and follies of youth because we long in vain for the appetites of our youth.

We jeer at bathing suits because our own bodies are ridiculous; we jeer at the fat man in plus-fours because we have neither the time nor the money for golf; we jeer at college graduates because we resent the hard fate that denied us a degree; we jeer at Greek letter fraternities because we were denied opportunity to join one; we jeer at diamonds because our jewelry came from the ten-cent store.

Our opinions are the product of our envy, and we cultivate scorn to lessen our longing.

Benedict Arnold betrayed his country because it denied him the honors his ability deserved.

And unless we watch ourselves closely, all of us who meet with denial will turn traitor to the thing we love.

On This Date—

Wilhelm Konrad Rontgen died February 9, 1923. It is an interesting point to consider just what part chance has played in the great discoveries of the world. Certainly that fickle goddess smiled benignly upon the human race one day in 1895 when Rontgen was experimenting with a Crookes tube. The tube was encased in a black cardboard box so that no light reached it. To Rontgen's great surprise he noticed that a paper screen covered with barium platinocyanide which happened to be lying near it was glowing brilliantly. Were some rays from the Crookes tube penetrating the cardboard box and affecting the crystals? To the physicist explanation was but a matter of investigation. The world soon learned that Rontgen had discovered a wonderful ray, which in view of the existing uncertainty as to its nature, he called the X-ray. The news flashed across the hemispheres. Recognition of its possibilities was immediate. A new branch of science had opened that was to be of as incalculable benefit to humanity as any previously discovered. Only days had elapsed before scientific men had photographed, for the first time, the bones of the human body. Wonderful advance has been made since that day. Every hospital has been equipped with an X-ray outfit all sorts of uses have been made for it. It was some time, however, before the pioneers discovered its destructive effects upon the flesh if used too freely. To those early martyrs must go the blessing of the human race. It was at Wurzburg that Rontgen made his great discovery. He was born at Lennep in 1845, receiving his early education in Holland. His ray added fame to an already distinguished career, and brought him the Rumford medal of the Royal Society.

THE "DOUCKS"

Victoria Times: There is no room in British Columbia for fanatics of this type. They may do a lot of damage in their "demonstrations." A year or so ago several schools were burned down, and while most of the cost of reconstructing them was levied on the Doukhobor community, the rest came out of the pockets of the taxpayers of the province. That sort of business has gone far enough. This is 1929; medieval practices and superstition have no place in our modern scheme of things. The government should make it plain that it will stand no more nonsense of this sort.

Fish Inspector Tells Of Phases Eastern District

R. P. Rodd, Dominion inspector of fisheries, returned to Edmonton on Saturday at the conclusion of a trip through the Vermilion and Kitscoty districts. Winter fishing, states Mr Rodd, is drawing to a conclusion, as the whitefish season terminates on the 15th of February. There is a limit fixed to the amount that may be taken from any of the lakes, and as soon as this is reached the operators are obliged to cease.

Asked as to the fishing at Cold Lake, concerning which representations have been made that it should be reserved exclusively as an attraction to tourists who delight in capturing the big trout, Mr. Rodd stated that this season the fishing has been kept to certain portions of the lake. These were nearest to the shore, where the whitefish abound, the object being to keep down these fish as much as possible, as they devour huge quantities of the trout spawn.

KEEP KIDNEYS CLEAR, DRINK MORE WATER

If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Also Take a Little Salts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Plane Inventor's Wife Jumps To Her Death

Mrs. Fokker Throws Herself From Bedroom Window, Fifteen Storeys Above Ground—Was an Expert Flier

Associated Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Mrs. Viola Fokker, wife of Anthony H. G. Fokker, aeroplane manufacturer and designer, committed suicide Friday night by jumping 15 storeys from the bedroom window of their Riverside drive apartment. She was 29 years of age. Mrs. Fokker was a native of Canada.

Mrs. Fokker suffered a nervous disorder two months ago and for a time was in a Boston hospital. She was removed a few days ago to the Presbyterian hospital here and had been discharged from there only this afternoon.

Fokker told police he returned home last night after a day of flying, and, being tired and sleepy, decided to take a nap before dinner. His wife, he said, was already resting.

She was in a highly nervous condition, he told police, and complained that "you are always sleepy, why don't you talk to me once in a while and pay some attention to me?"

He attempted to quiet her, he said, and then fell asleep.

Mrs. Fokker called the maid and ordered Mr. Fokker's dinner and a glass of water for herself. When the maid returned with the water Mrs. Fokker was gone. The maid wakened Fokker, who noticed the window was open and looking out he saw his wife's body lying in the driveway 15 storeys below.

Police said that a protecting ventilator had been removed from the window and listed the case "a suicide." Fokker collapsed and is under the care of a physician.

Mrs. Fokker was an expert flyer and frequently piloted her husband's planes. They were married two years ago.

Mr. Fokker is at native of Holland and came to this country in 1920.

royal ambulance His Majesty was seen to raise his hand in greeting and in acknowledgment of their cheers.

Five minutes after the big black and green ambulance, fitted with every modern comfort, had left the palace, Queen Mary herself entered a waiting car and was whisked to Bognor.

The king could be seen lying propped up on a narrow bed close to one side of the ambulance, a pale and wan figure. He was seen to smile as the people cheered, then to raise his hand and wave slightly. The gesture was a faint one and the very weakness of the action brought renewed cheers of sympathy from the crowd.

By the king's side could be seen a nurse. Beside his chauffeur sat Howlett, his valet. Behind the ambulance was another car with Lord Dawson of Penn and Sir Stanley Hewitt. Cars with nurses and attendants followed.

Three of his sons, the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and Prince George, bade their father goodbye at the palace before he started on his journey.

The ambulance was not long in working its way out of the grime and fog of the metropolis to the fresher air and brighter skies of Surrey hills and Sussex downs. Every village along the countryside contained its crowd of watchers, waiting to cheer the monarch's passage.

"As for the present reference to the courts of section 17 of the Alberta Act, the matter is before the judicial committee of the Privy Council, but their lordships have expressed the view that there should be an appellant party other than the Dominion government whose contentions were upheld by the unanimous judgment of the supreme court of Canada. We understand your province does not wish to appear in the capacity of an appellant in this reference. We will consider further the advisability of our government taking steps with a view to having this appeal proceeded with, in order to secure a decision of the Privy Council in the matter.

No Further Modification

"It should be understood that these proposals now made to the province of Alberta have been very carefully considered by the Dominion government and are not subject to further modification by correspondence. It is our hope that the government of Alberta will see in this offer an indication of the sincere desire of the Dominion government to arrange an early settlement of this long standing question."

Manitoba Solution

The documents disclosed that with respect to Manitoba the solution hinges upon the decision of the commission which is now investigating the financial and other considerations relative thereto. The commission will hold a hearing on Tuesday, February 12. Its personnel comprises Mr. Justice Turgeon, Hon. T. A. Crerar and C. M. Bowman.

Subject to agrement by the two governments concerned, legislation will be introduced into both federal and provincial houses to give effect to whatever recommendations are acquiesced in.

Will Meet Saskatchewan

With regard to Saskatchewan, Premier James G. Gardiner and members of his cabinet will meet the federal government here on Tuesday, February 19. This has been arranged in response to a communication from Premier Gardiner.

"The object of this delegation will be to have the unalienated resources turned over to the province and also to discuss the terms under which the transfer will be mutually accepted," Premier Gardiner's communication reads.

sects to end the bloody conflicts which began over rumors that Pathans had used Hindu children as sacrifices. The peace loving elements of both races had hailed the announcement of the armistice and joined shoulder to shoulder in a march through streets along which the shops were being reopened everywhere.

Then in the Madanpura quarter the head of the procession stumbled over the dead body of a Hindu, slashed by knives and lying in the street. In the excitement caused by this discovery, trouble flared up without warning in all parts of the city which had seen the disturbances previously. Hindus and Moslems who had been fraternizing freely in each other's quarters, suddenly found themselves isolated in hostile territory and fought their way out to avoid slaughter.

The military, reinforced by armored cars, moved continually between the fighting throngs and several times fired on the mob, once with a machine gun. Casualties, mostly cases of stabbing, streamed into the hospitals, which quickly filled. In some quarters mobs looted shops and houses.

Peasants Responsible

The new outbreak was blamed on sturdy Hindu peasants whom shopkeepers of the faith had brought in from the country to protect them against Moslem attacks. It appeared that these "protectors" disappointed by finding a truce had been made, flatly declined to accept it.

It was estimated that thirty were killed and more than 100 injured Friday night in the fighting in the Pybhowni district, where the troops were compelled to fire. It was impossible to estimate the total casualties in the large sections of the bazaar area over which the fighting spread and into which it was impossible to venture without grave danger. The fighting was the most bitter since the first outbreak of the disorders.

Returning to Edmonton Friday after attending the convention at Calgary of the Automobile section of the Retail Merchants of Alberta, Mr. A. T. Williamson, secretary for the northern section, reports a very successful series of meetings. C. Wilcox, of the Buick-Pontiac Motors, Edmonton, was elected vice-president, and A. Johnson, of the Freeman Hudson-Essex Co., was made a member of the executive. Local delegates attending included J. B. Slaky of the Penn Motor Co.; A. Johnson, Hudson-Essex; C. Wilcox, Buick-Pontiac; F. Chorley, Dominion Motors; and J. White, Premier Motors.

Two building permits, aggregating $7,000, were issued by the city building department Saturday. Alterations to the Muttart block, 10346 97 street, which will be converted into a hotel by the owner, J. W. McLean, will cost $6,000, the permit shows. The alterations include construction of a fireproof lining on the elevator shaft and carrying out other improvements which will render the building more fireproof. M. A. Gillis was authorized to carry out alterations to a building at 10333 82 avenue. The work will cost $1,000.

ADVANCE SPRING MODES

— IN MILLINERY —

New hats show novel headlines and necklines with more than a hint of a brim, even though it be in most instances upturned. The prevailing colors shown are the new brown tones—blacks—blues and greens. But there is also a strong tendency to pastel shades for Spring wear, such as tan, parchment, eggshell, powder blue, butter, yellow, almond green, coco-cola, and red.

Many hats are shown with a mixture of felt and straw. That is, felt crowns with straw brims—straw crowns with felt brims—felt inlaid with exotic straw and vice versa. Crowns are still closely moulded to the contours of the head. Brims are short at back and extend out to three or four inches in front with longer movement to the right side.

—THE ENSEMBLE

Carrying out the ensemble idea are hat and scarf sets. Particularly striking is the Bakou hat and scarf sets of red Cloche slashed at the front to show an insert of vari-colored ribbon on modernistic silk. Draped turbans, which in reality are mere caps, are enjoying tremendous favor for day-time wear as well as for evening functions.

With Woodward's policy of "Fashion without extravagance" every woman can choose a Spring hat with the assurance that style, quality and price is of the best. Sizes for every headsize—small, medium and large.

Welsh Imperial Singers Score In Fine Concert

Well Balanced Program of Solos, Duets and Choruses Pleases Enthusiastic Audience at New Empire

Under the auspices of the Edmonton Newsboys Band the famous Imperial Singers of Wales appeared at the New Empire theatre on Friday evening and by their excellent solo, duet and chorus singing immediately ingratiated themselves into the very best graces of the audience, meeting with one of the most cordial receptions yet to be recorded to a group of visiting artists.

The singing throughout was of a high quality and on a lofty plane of excellence.

In sole assignments the singers were exceptionally pleasing, there being a limpid, appealing quality in the tenors that found exceptional favor with the audience and in the baritones and basses a magnificent, moving quality that commanded attention, admiration and respect. In ensemble work there was balance, poise, power and purpose and an enthusiasm for the work in hand that merited nothing but the warmest praise.

Too much praise cannot be given the singers, both individually and collectively and it would be like painting the lily to say more. The audience was not as large as the merit of the singing deserved, but what was lacking in quantity was more than made up for in appreciation. Each and every number was greeted with tremendous outbursts of applause and two and three encores were the regular thing.

While the audience, as said above, was none too large, it is a safe assertion that by the time the afternoon and evening performances of Saturday have rolled around accommodation in the theatre will be at a premium.

Harry Williams and Jabez Trevor proved themselves outstandingly fine tenors. The former has a most appealing lyric tenor with a fine quality that cannot fail to appeal. His "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby" was a masterpiece and was roundly encored at least twice. Mr. Trevor possesses a more robust voice than Mr. Williams and one in which there is a thrilling, vibrant tone that raises enthusiasm to a high pitch. His "Asra" with accompanying encores, left room for nothing but praise and will be long remembered.

Jack Newbury, bass, gave a highly polished interpretation of "In Hallowed Dwellings" from Mozart's "Magic Flute." Scarcely less artistic was his masterly singing of the encore, "Drink to Me Only."

Mr. Trevor and Wilfred Jones combined to sing "The Two Beggars" while the chorus sang such popular and well known numbers as "John Peel," "Just a-Wearin' for You;" "Crossing the Plain;" "The Lost Chord;" "All Through the Night" and "Songs of the Jolly Roger."

R. Festyn Davies conducted the chorus numbers most expertly, while G. Lloyd Davies was a first-class accompanist.

This chorus provides a most satisfying program.

New Song Composed For Mary Pickford

Five new motion picture theme songs, dedicated to Mary Pickford, Dolores del Rio, Lupe Velez, Camilla Horn and Eleanor Boardman, are announced today by United Artists.

Irving Berlin has composed "Coquette" for the Mary Pickford picture of that name.

Al Jolson has composed "Evangeline" for the Dolores del Rio film version of Longfellow's poem.

Berlin's "Where Is the Song of Songs For Me?" recurs through the reels of "Lady of the Pavements," in which Lupe Velez sings. This is the new D. W. Griffith picture.

"Eternal Love" is the name of the theme song for the John Barrymore-Ernst Lubitsch production in which Camilla Horn is leading lady. It was composed by Peter de Rose, Dave Dreyer and Ballard MacDonald; the Berlin company publishes it.

"Joan," dedicated to the character portrayed by Eleanor Boardman in "She Goes to War", was composed by Lewis and Young and Harry Akst, composers of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

FAMOUS OPERA IS PRODUCED IN NEW YORK

Krenek's Jonny, who, of course belongs on Broadway, has at last appeared there. But it was curious to see him in the Metropolitan Opera House, where "Jonny Spielt Auf" received its first American performance on the evening of Jan. 19. Perhaps Jonny would be more at home in a musical comedy, a "revue," a cabaret or a night club, than in the classic walls of the Metropolitan. On the other hand, it is to be feared that Jonny would amuse the patrons of those other forms of entertainment in a way that he did not intend.

For although the type derives from Broadway, Krenek's Jonny would be unable to conceal the fact that he was actually an imitation, imported from the jazz colonies of Europe. Especially so since Michael Bohnen, the Metropolitan's Johnny, is himself a foreign artist, famous for the variety of headdresses he gives to Hagen. Mr. Bohnen made a surprisingly good blackface comedian, imitating very correctly the swagger, the insolence, the naive sophistication of the type. Note that in New York Jonny becomes not a Negro, but a blackface comedian; Mr. Bohnen's face was blacked but his neck remained unmistakably white. This seems to be a necessary concession in America.

Many Elements

But this impersonation was always an imitation. Probably no one imagined for a moment that here was the authentic personage. And the weakness of the leading impersonation is the weakness of the composer as well. This work is inaccurately described as a jazz opera. There is jazz in it, but it is very early jazz, which probably would cause customers of a musical comedy to clamor at the box office for their money back. This jazz never sprang from the soil. It never even came filtered through the musical intelligence of a Carpenter or a Gershwin. It is obviously a European copy.

The jazz element, moreover, can hardly be called the basis of the opera; although it would perhaps be hard to say what that basis is. There are also elements of the romantic opera, of "verism," of operetta, of musical comedy, the "revue," the cabaret, even of burlesque. The jazz, such as it is, triumphs at the end; yet, musically it seems incidental. The work is said to interpret the rhythms and atmosphere of modern life in this age of technical science." Of course, it does nothing of the sort, and probably its composer does not deceive himself that it does. At best, it satirizes an ephemeral, superficial and narrowly restricted phase of "modern life." There has been debate whether Krenek intended a satire or a solemn dissertation. No doubt the whole matter has been taken too seriously. Krenek has composed an amusing potpourri which has had a prodigal popular success. It not that enough?

The Production

There is better music in the parts of the score which do not attempt the jazz idiom. The theme in the overture, which seems to indicate the glacier, is a very acceptable invention for this purpose, and its use in the later scenes is that of a man who knows his business. The love music is banal, but perhaps that is appropriate to a composer like Max, who would make a Byronic hero look sensible. The quality of romanticism is present in the music, both openly and in the conventional modernist disguise. But the musical substance is of doubtful value on the whole, whether romantic melodramatic or burlesque. Both again let us not take the matter too seriously. We are dealing merely with a diverting entertainment.

Popular interest centered in the production, with particular reference to the mechanical contrivances. The Metropolitan management had devoted a great deal of thought and time and money to these problems of radio loudspeakers, dance orchestras, steam engines, motorcars, clocks and revolving globes. The results were opulent but not illusive. There was nothing in the aspect of the oncoming train that made us jump from our seats, nor were we disturbed by Jonny's abduction of a stage automobile. In the final scene the curtain was lowered while the clock was changed into a revolving globe for Jonny to fiddle on. The chorus then appeared in musical comedy chorus costumes, while drops and wings gave a background of skyscrapers, the Statue of Liberty and American flags. Mr. Urban might have treated the glacier more imaginatively, but his interiors were sumptuous.

The personal charm and excellent vocalism of Florence Easton did not quite enable her to enter into and possess the character of Anita. Mr Kirchhoff gave a clear delineation of Max, the composer, who preferred the conversation of glaciers. Mr. Schorr did not seem quite at home as Daniello. Miss Edith Fleischer, on the other hand, was an engagingly pert soubrette.

Little Princess

This little girl visited grandma when her folks went away. Princess Josephine-Charlotte of Belgium, only child of the heir apparent and his wife, the Duke and Duchess of Brabant, is pictured here with her grandmother, wife of Prince Carl of Sweden, with whom she is staying while her parents are on a tour of the Dutch East Indies.

MATZENAUER WILL RETURN ON FEB. 20TH

World Famous Contralto to Sing at the Empire Theatre

The first delight of an audence when Margaret Matzenauer appears is her striking Junoesque figure arrayed usually in a stunning creation of the modiste's art and, with a scintillating tiara, she presents a radiant and fascinating picture.

After one has subsided from the first electrical impression of Margaret Matzenauer's striking stage presence, one is then rethrilled with the first delights of her opening song, for her's isa voice that, for sheer vocal beauty, has few peers, and no superiors.

Probably there is no other operatic singer before the public today that can duplicate the feat of Margaret Matzenauer whose remarkable voice enables her to sing contralto and dramatic soprano roles. Who else can sing Fidelio, the three Brunnhildes, Selika, Donna, Elvira, Kundry, Isolde, Orfeo, Carmen, Amneris, Dalila and Fides?

In choosing programs for her recitals, Margaret Matzenauer includes one or more of the famous operatic arias that have won signal triumphs at the Metropolitan as well as in Europe. Her versatility is so extensive that she can vary her song selections so as to please all—a little classic, some modern, touch of Spanish or Russian, perhaps French chansons or English ballads and of course not forgetting the American composers.

"Thrills" is the most significant word that may be applied to Margaret Matzenauer's recitals. Her magnificent voice and queenly appearance always awaken audiences to a state of emotional enthusiasm. Few artists have a finer sense of what is known as "the melodic lines" and none surpass here in power of interpretation.

This renowned artist, conceded by the leading critics of Europe and America to be the greatest contralto of her day will appear in the Empire theatre on Wednesday, February 20 at 8.30 p.m. in a magnificent program of operatic, art songs and ballads, assisted by the distinguished accompanist and pianist, Edward Hart of New York. Such a gorgeous and phenomenal voice as Matzenauer's is heard only once in a lifetime. The concert is under the auspices of the Metropolitan United Choir.

Irma District Loses Pioneers

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

IRMA, Feb. 9.—Two pioneers of the Irma district have recently passed away in Edmonton. The first Orbin B. Sproule, who death occurred on January 25, was one of the old settlers in the Orbindale district, where at one time he had a big ranch and ran a large number of cattle till about 15 years ago, the range being taken up by homesteaders, he sold his cattle and land and settled in Edmonton. Mr. Sproule bought the first lots that were sold by the townsite company when the village of Irma was put on the market. The second to be called to the great beyond was Mrs. Chris. J. Creamer, who for a number of years lived on the N.W. of section 10-46-8-4, who passed away at her home in Edmonton on January 30. The late Mrs. Creamer, who also came to the Irma district before Irma was on the map, was well known to all of the old settlers in the Roseberry district, where she always took a keen interest in the religious and social life of the district. Mrs. Creamer is survived by her husband, two sons, James and Roy, who are living at Jasper, Alberta, and two daughters, Mrs. Norman Lyons and Mrs. Sam Hamill, both of Edmonton.

Mr. J. W. Stuart has received instructions to hold an auction sale of the farm equipment, livestock, etc., of the late Mr. Seton. The sale will be held on Wednesday, February 20.

The following trustees representing some of the school boards in the Irma district, left the first of the week to attend the trustees' convention at Lethbridge: M. D. Askin, A. Blakley, W. A. Burton, J. Carrington, William Walker, and N. B. King, of Fabyan.

Monday night Jas. A. Hedley was re-elected by acclamation as member of the council of the village of Irma. Only 10 ratepayers and two councillors turned out to attend the annual meeting.

Miss A. Fluewelling has been confined to her home with a bad cold.

The weather for the past week has continued cold and bright, although it has not been nearly as cold as it was the week before. Enough snow has fallen to make good sleighing, and several farmers are taking advantage of it to get their surplus grain drawn out. Trucks and cars are still running in practically all parts of the district.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hardy returned Tuesday after a two weeks' trip to Vancouver and B.C. points. Mr. Hardy says there was more snow in Vancouver than at Irma, and that the weather was very disagreeable while they were there.

H. E. Jones, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, left Tuesday evening for a six weeks' trip to Honolulu. T. Y. Love, of Calgary, will be in charge of the bank till Mr. Jones returns.

THOUGH ALIVE, LEGALLY DEAD

Berlin Man Finds Self in Awkward Predicament Through Tangle

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—A. W. Wothke, sailor, despite the fact that he has been breathing ever since he was born in 1869, has been dead since 1912, according to the law.

More than 16 years ago he was erroneously entered as deceased in the Hamburg city register.

Not even the fact that Wothke has regularly been paying his income tax, which can hardly be expected of a dead man, could induce the authorities to cancel their obviously erroneous entry.

Wothke has been fighting for his life, as it were, for the past 15 years. Now the exasperated "living corpse" has submitted his case to a reichstag deputy, who, after convincing himself that Wothke is alive, took up the matter with the Hamburg authorities.

He submitted full details to Wothke's whereabouts and doings for the last 16 years, urging that the authorities revise their opinion that sailor Wothke is dead.

But the efforts of the reichstag deputy, too, were of no avail. The Hamburg department of justice, politely but firmly, refused to annul the erroneous entry in the city register and to "reincarnate" Wothke.

Cantata Presented Ryley United Choirs

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

RYLEY, Feb. 9.—The united choirs of the United Church and the Lutheran churches who have been practicing the Cantata entitled, "The Wonderous Light," put it on in the United Church before a large and well satisfied audience, Wednesday. There were 17 comprising all, and the choruses, solos, duets, and quartettes were put on much to the enjoyment of all. The "selection" was somewhat difficult, and judged from the standpoint of non-professionals, and also in view of some of the singers not being able to attend on account of illness, it may be said it was "Excellent." Mrs. Mehus, the leader, deserves much credit the way she handled the program. Mrs. McPherson, teacher of expression, gave two readings, and members of her class, Miss Carmichael, Miss Eleanor Lobb, and Josephene Brown, did excellently in their readings. The affair was pronounced a grand success.

Jas. Cockburn, nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd, here, received a cablegram from his mother in Fifeshire, Scotland, to come home on account of her serious illness. He left at once.

A. Stumbo, while working around a grinder, got his clothing caught in the belt, and one of his arms was broken.

The 'flu is subsiding considerably and most of the patients are out and around again. The school has normal attendance again.

Noted Screen Players Will Be Seen in Edmonton Theatres Next Week

FOLLIES STAR AT DREAMLAND

"Waterfront" Gives Featured Dancer Big Chance in Films

The latest deserter of the New York stage for the movies is seen in "Waterfront," the First National picture coming next Monday to the Dreamland Theatre.

She is Cecil Bruner, formerly featured dancer with the Follies, who portrays the role of a dance hall girl in the presentation. Miss Bruner is less than five feet tall and weighs but eighty-five pounds. Nevertheless, she has "pep" to the nth degree and a promising screen career is predicted for her.

"Waterfront" once more brings together Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in co-featured roles. Miss Mackaill is seen as the daughter of a tugboat captain and Mulhall as an oiler on a tramp steamer. The direction was by William Seiter, who recently completed "Happiness Ahead" with Colleen Moore.

The chief products of the Cape Verde Islands are coffee, hides and millet.

Emil Jannings Stars In Sensational Film At Empress Monday

"Sins of the Fathers" Hailed as One of Screen's Masterpieces—Notable Cast Supports Famous Actor in Gripping Role of Master Bootlegger

Emil Jannings, the celebrated German-American stage and screen star comes to the Empress theatre on Monday in his latest Paramount picture "Sins of the Fathers." Ludvig Berger likewise a leader in his branch of the profession, handled the direction of the film.

Jannings, in the role of a German-American, Wilhelm Spengler, starts as a waiter, becomes a saloon keeper then a rich bootlegger, followed by a prison term in which he acts as a walter, and upon release falls back to the vocation of a waiter again, this time in a picnic garden. Throughout he plays the kind of a man that American audiences know. He plays the part of a man that every theatregoer can understand and sympathize with.

The sensational theme of bootlegging is handled in a way to which no one will object, because the picture does not glorify the criminal aspects of bootlegging. On the other hand bootlegging brings intense tragedy to Janning's life.

The famous actor has a notable supporting cast headed by Ruth Chatterton, the well known stage actress. Others in the cast are, Zasu Pitts, who has become one of the screen's greatest tragediennes; Barry Norton, Jean Arthur, Jack Luden, Matthew Betz, Harry Cording, Arthur Housman and Frank Reicher.

Famous Novel Is Filmed At Rialto

Starting at the Rialto on Thursday Temple Bailey's famous novel "Wallflowers." The book, which has been read by millions, has been made into an even more interesting picture. It deals with the troubles and adventures of two country sisters who embark on a social career in a great city. At first because of their strangeness to city ways they are dubbed "Wallflowers," but later they grow wiser—and then the fun begins. "Wallflowers" is one of the most interesting pictures shown in months.

As an added attraction, Ranger appears in his latest film "Fangs of the Wild." It contains all the thrills and suspense of this great dog-stars former pictures.

Several short subjects are on the same program, including the weekly world News, while Cecil Lord and his Music-makers appear nightly, and as a special attraction the Misses Doris Jordan, Helen Shirlaw and Company will be heard in a song and dance presentation.

Big Talkie Studio Will Cost $250,000

On the heels of the announcement of the change of name of FBO Studios to RKO Studios, Inc., operations were started this week within the studio grounds in Hollywood on a construction program that involves the expenditure of $250,000.00, according to announcement by William Le Baron vice-president of RKO Productions, Inc., in charge of production.

The undertaking includes the soundproofing of all standing stages and the building of a new sound-proof stage for the filming of motion pictures.

Three new projection rooms, especially adapted to the needs of sound film production, likewise will be built.

LIFE PROBLEM WELL HANDLED AT MONARCH

Aftermath of War on Social Life Subject of Big Film

It is clear now that the war effected a complete evolution in the relationship of the sexes. In the national emergency, women shouldered the burden of commercial responsibility and independence was a natural development. Men, too, unceremoniously snatched from social and domestic ties and thrust into an animal life of mud and blood in Flanders, inevitably became elemental and creatures of impulse and passion. And one result of this combination of circumstances against the sexes was a temporary large increase in the number of divorce cases.

But a less apparent result in many cases was a great realization of dependence; wives learned to appreciate their husbands and menfolk found that affection meant something more than pretty words and perfunctory kisses.

That is the theme of Mr. Frank Stayton's novel, "The Passionate Adventure," which comes to the Monarch on Monday as a film offering.

The war upsets a union of detached harmony, the peaceful, passionless married life of Adrian and Drusilla St. Clair—but the upset ultimately has the advantage of bringing them closer together and teaching them the true meaning of matrimony.

Sang Way To Star's Heart and Talkie Job

Sammy Stept, Broadway song writer, today claimed credit for fathering the screen's first synchronized romance.

It was Stept who composed "I'll Always Be in Love With You," and it was Morton Downey, night club favorite, who sang it to Barbara Bennett before the microphone at Sound Studios and then followed up his opportunity by insisting that he meant it.

Miss Bennett, daughter of Richard and former dancing partner of the famed Maurice, and Downey were married at St. Patrick's Cathedral Monday. Plans for a surprise wedding failed.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Downey make their first "talkie" appearance with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians in "Syncopation," the musical screen extravaganza scheduled soon for Broadway.

Olive Borden Will Star For F. B. O.

Olive Borden, the vivacious screen beauty whose come-back in "Gang War" provided the movie world with one of its choice sensations last season, stepped into the select star group being assembled for RKO Productions when she was signed for two pictures by William Le Baron, West Coast production chief, today.

Under the contract signed, RKO Productions has the option on Miss Borden's services for two more pictures during the year.

Miss Borden, who left a Los Angeles telephone switchboard five years ago to climb to stardom literally over night and then dropped back into semi-obscurity as quickly, had claimed she was the victim of indifferent stories and direction. She proved her contention last season by giving Broadway one of its big thrills in "Gang War," following it up with "Sinners in Love." After that came "Love in the Desert," a sound and dialogue production which apparently convinced RKO officials that she was ready for "talkie" stardom.

Baby Clinic Is Coming To Gem

"The Baby Cyclone," co-starring Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle, comes to the Gem Theatre beginning Monday. It is a Metro-Goldwyn Mayer picture, directed by Eddie Sutherland from thescript based on George M Cohan's successful stage comedy

Supporting the co-starring team are Gwen Lee, Robert Armstrong, Richard Carlyle, Nora Cecil, Robert Dudley, Fred Esmelton, Clarissa Selwynne and Wade Boteler.

Story of Romance, Love, Intrigue, Mystery and Crime Coming

Romance, love, intrigue, mystery crime—a story of carnival life at its best and worst—these are the elements that go to make "The Speller," which will have a three days showing at Pantages starting Monday, a thrilling and fascinating entertainment. This combined with many extra features including a three reel special entitled "Thrilling Moments" depicts ring history, and the appearance on Tuesday of the "Georgian Singers and Players" a quartette of western singers now touring Canada, gives to Edmonton a show never before equalled in Pantages or any other theatre.

Artistically produced by experts "The Speller" is in every respect a great picture. It handles an ever popular subject in a highly entertaining manner. The story deals with a spirited young woman who inherited a carnival and who seeks to eliminate a lawless element that follows in the wake of her enterprise. Thereby she incurs the hostility of several crooks but she meanwhile met "The Speller," who, while he warns small town carnival patrons to beware of pickpockets, is himself a thief. A love romance develops between the two, and this provokes a series of thrilling occurrences which hold the attention until the final fade-out.

A comedy creation is also on this programme extraordinary, which will undoubtedly pack this popular house to capacity.

TOM AND TONY IS BIG FILM

"Son of the Golden West" at Princess is Real Thriller

With the coming of Tom Mix in "Son of the Golden West" to the Princess Theatre next Monday, local movie fans will have an opportunity to see this outstanding outdoors star in the first of his big super specials for FBO.

New and bigger sensations in the outdoors thrill line are promised for "Son of the Golden West," a tale of the pioneer express, due to Tom Mix's determination to make pictures that would match up to the enthusiasm shown for him by America's movie fans during his recent ten week tour over the Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit.

In this connection it is stated that all previous records at these houses for attendance were shattered. The Morning Telegraph of New York seems to have summed up Mix's achievements in this line. It said, "Tom must take pride in the fact that he takes away in his big Stetson a new feather by having established a new attendance record at the big Hippodrome, and that Tony and he in competition with some of the world's outstanding box-office attractions of the past have captured the "championship" and have ridden over them all."

Georgian Singers and Players Coming To Pantages On Tuesday

Something different and out-of-the-ordinary is scheduled for the Pantages theatre commencing Tuesday night in The Georgian Singers and Players, who will present the latest New York song successes, old songs, loved for years, humorous monologues and dialogues, interesting innovations.

The artists appearing are all Western Canadians and includ the following: John Edmonson, Baritone and comedian, Gloria Wilson, talented pianiste and contralto, Horace Chapman, Devon's Silver-toned tenor, and Isobel Jolliffe.

Manager Wilson is to be congratulated on having secured such talented artists.

Conrad Novel Is New Colman Film

"The Rescue," a film version of the Joseph Conrad novel with Ronald Colman in the character of "King Tom" Lingard, has been completed by Herbert Brenon, who also directed Mr. Colman in "Beau Geste," a photoplay medal film. Lily Damita, French actress imported by producer Samuel Goldwyn from Europe, makes her American screen debut in this production in the role of Mrs. Edith Travers. One member of the cast, Duke Kahanamoku, the swimming champion, has been seen in another film version of a Conrad novel. In "The Rescue" he appears as Jaffir. In "Lord Jim" he portrayed Tamb Itam.

At least five Joseph Conrad novels have been filmed by American producers. They are "The Rescue," "Victory," "Lord Jim," "Nostromo" and "Romance." The first three came to the screen with their original titles. "Nostromo" was offered in films as "The Silver Treasure" and "Romance" as "The Road to Romance."

Screen Stars All Trying Out Talkies

Norma Talmadge will talk throughout her next film. This all-talking picture will be based on a Broadway stage play, as yet unselected. It will be a modern story, Miss Talmadge will play a role that will exhibit her fashionably gowned, and the star's voice will be heard for the first time in a talking picture.

The voice of Gilbert Roland, who will be leading man, also will be heard for the first time.

The play that will be brought to films by Miss Talmadge is to be picked from several, including two current Broadway productions, now under consideration by John W. Considine, Jr., United Artists Studio executive, who is in New York, negotiating with various theatrical producers.

George Fitzmaurice will direct.

C. Gardner Sullivan will write the scenario.

Back in Hollywood after a short stay in New York, Miss Talmadge awaits telegraphic advice from the east before beginning rehearsals. The talking picture version will be made before the silent version. Laura Hope Crewes, prominent stage actress, is in Hollywood; she will rehearse Miss Talmadge's lines with the star.

Norma Talmadge thus joins the ranks of Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Vilma Banky, Douglas Fairbanks, Ronald Colman, Harry Richman, Lupe Velez, Walter Byron, Eleanor Griffith, Joan Bennett and Johnny Mack Brown all of whom will be heard in United Artists' talking pictures during 1929

It was the custom among Romans to shave off the beard at the age of 21, and present it as an offering to the household gods. A beard was grown after that age only as a sign of mourning.

STIRRING SEA FILM COMING TO RIALTO

"Shanghaied" is Tale of Tall Ships and Deep-sea Sailormen

Another double-feature program opens on Monday at the Rialto Theatre. Patsy Ruth Miller and Ralph Ince appear in a drama of the sea entitled "Shanghaied," while Irene Rich stars in "Beware of Married Men" a gay comedy-farce of married life.

"Shanghaied" goes back to the roaring days of tall-masted schooners, and their fighting motley crews who sailed the Seven Seas. Ralph Ince, who also directs the picture, plays the part of "Hurricane Hawley" skipper of a whaler which has just returned to 'Frisco from a trip to the Behring Sea He meets Polly, the role taken by Patsy Ruth Miller, who is a dancer in Crawley's Dog-Watch Theatre, one of the waterfront haunts of the sailors in 'Frisco, and falls in love with her.

From then on the story develops into a racing, fighting drama of the sea with all the thrills of mutinous crews smashing fights, and raging storms.

"Beware of Married Men" is an entirely different type of picture. The splendid cast headed by Irene Rich also boasts Audrey Ferris, Clyde Cook Myrna Loy and Richard Tucker.

In addition there are several short features, and Cecil Lord and his Music Makers are on the stage every evening. As a special attraction for the week, the Misses Doris Jordan, Helen Shirlaw and Company present an entertaining dance act.

ALMOST READY TO SHOOT

Bert Glennon, who directed "Syncopation," musical extravaganza with Warings Pennsylvanians, Barbara Bennett, Morton Downey, Ian Hunter and Dorothy Lee, is cutting the picture and expects to have it ready for showing in one week.

As soon as he completes this job, Mr. Glennon will fly to the Coast where he will direct one of RKO's new productions

THE LIFE OF CHRIST St. John, Chapt. 18. Peter Smites Off The Ear Of Malchus

The soldier escort of Judas, come upon Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane, had been flung back and had fallen on the ground when Jesus proclaimed His identity
Simon Peter anxious to defend his Master, and little realizing that He needed no human defence, drew his sword
He rushed upon the servant of the High Priest, one Malchus, and cut off his right ear.
But Christ remonstrated, "Put up thy sword: the cup which My Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?"

Canadian Bible Society Holds Successful Meet

Eleventh Annual Gathering Hears Interesting Reports of Year's Work—Timely Address Delivered by Visiting Cleric

The eleventh annual meeting of the North Alberta Auxiliary of the Canadian Bible Society was held in the First Baptist Church on Thursday evening. W. H. Sterne, president of the organization, occupied the chair. The Scriptures were read by the Rev. Dr. Mitchell and Rev. Dr. D. G. McQueen offered prayer.

Rev. J. K. Smith, district secretary, then gave his annual report. This is Mr. Smith's second report as head of the work in Northern Alberta, and is very gratifying to the officers and all concerned, in that marked progress has been made along all lines of the Society's work during the year. The free-will contributions of the people have aided in putting the Scriptures into fifteen new languages, making a total of six hundred and twelve. The amount contributed was $8,851.78, or an increase of $816.42 over the year 1927. Sales in the Bible House on Jasper Ave., amounted to $6,482.61, an increase over the previous year of $921.43. Two colporteurs, at work parts of the year sold books to the value of $1,246.17, which is an increase of $692.66. Stock to the value of $1,500.76 was purchased and not only was this paid for but the indebtedness to the British and Foreign Bible Society was reduced by $209.18. Mr. Smith made a strong appeal for support for more colporteurs, citing two gifts of $100.00 each recently handed in, an amount which will pay the salary of a man for two months He asked for 48 more such gifts during the year, in order to put to work splendid young men who have already offered for this work and are anxious to get at it.

The financial statement indicated that the total income of the Auxiliary for the year amounted to $16,580.56, that a larger amount had been sent in headquarters than in any previous year, and that a balance of nearly $1,000 remains to the credit of the local auxiliary.

Obtain Certificates

Life membership certificates obtained by a gift of at least $50 were presented by the honorary secretary, Mrs. W. J. Melrose, to Mrs. Eileen Scott Adshead, E. R. L. Brown, George Marshall Price, G. C. Irwin, Rev. A. A. Lytlle and Mrs. R. B. Empey.

The speaker of the evening was Rev H. A. Alderwood, L.Th., rector of St. James Anglican church, Saskatoon, and former district secretary of this auxiliary. The title of his address was "Explosives in Print." In dealing with his subject he quoted from a speech made by Premier Baldwin of Great Britain last May, in which he said: "Books contain some potency of life and their activity is dependent on the soul whence they sprang. This is supremely true of the Bible. It is not only 'mere literature,' whatever that phrase may mean; it is not only the greatest literature in the world, but above and beyond all that, it always has been, and is, in the nature of a high explosive in the world." He spoke of the magical power of speech and of the potential energy of written words holding and carrying thought from life to life and from age to age, and in this connection pictured the Bible as a living book as shown in its influence on St. Augustine, on Luther and the Reformation, and on England after the time of Tyndale, quoting the historian Green as saying that "England became the people of a book, and that book the Bible." It was belief in this "explosive" power of the Bible that brought into existence the British and Foreign Bible Society 125 years ago, he said and through these years it has proved itself a living message for all men. He dealt with the changed conditions in India, Africa and China during the time the Society has been in existence pointing out that a leading Chinese general had said that the revolution had started in China when Robert Morrison translated the Bible into Chinese. He closed with a strong appeal for the support of the organization that is making it possible for people speaking 612 different languages to have national and racial prejudices and barriers broken down and a spirit of true fellowship and brotherhood developed through the dynamic contained within the Book that is ever bringing God to man and man to God and pointing out to every man what he may become through Jesus Christ.

The choir of First Baptist church rendered a splendid anthem, and Rev. H. D. Marr of Calgary pronounced the benediction, bringing to a close one of the most successful meetings ever held in the history of the organization.

Rev. Wilfred Gaetz At McDougall

Rev. Wilfred Gaetz will speak Sunday evening on "What to Believe about the Death of Jesus."

In the morning his subject will be, "The Helpful Ministry of Humble Lives."

Mr. W. J. Hendra will render a solo at the morning service and Mrs. J. C. Nattress will sing in the evening, "The Voice of One Crying in the Wilderness," by Prindle Scott.

Famous Fables Retold

There was once a Dog who was so wicked and ill-natured that his Master had to fasten a log about his neck to keep him from annoying the neighbors.

But the Dog instead of being ashamed, as he should, seemed to be proud of the log and dragged it about with him noisily as if he wished to attract attention. He was not, however, able to impress any one.

One day a little dog chanced to pass him and stopped to give this advice. "You would be much wiser," he said, "to keep quietly out of sight with that log. Do you want every one to know what a wicked, disgraceful Dog you have been? If I were you I should go home and hide in my cellar until my Master had forgiven me and I had shown him I could be a good dog.

NOTORIETY IS NOT FAME."

Special Service At Nazarene Church

FAMOUS CHURCHES OF THE WORLD

Cathedral, Segovia, Spain.

The cathedral of Segovia is a splendid specimen of the florid style of Gothic architecture. It was built in the sixteenth century to replace an older one, which was destroyed in 1520. It was begun five years later by Juan Gil de Ontanon and his son Rodrigo Gil, after the designs of their magnificent cathedral at Salamanca and is said to have been the last of the purely Gothic cathedrals. Its beauty is enhanced by the peculiarly rich color of the stone of which it is built. The cupola which crowns its square tower was originally three hundred and fifty feet high, but was lowered twenty-two feet for greater security from lightning.

Its cloisters, which are very rich and graceful, belong to the former cathedral and Juan Carupero performed the extraordinary feat of taking them down and putting them up again in exactly their original shape. The interior is bright and cheerful and is very striking on account of the bold and harmonious designs of the arches and the richness and elaboration of the vaulting. Most of the windows are filled with picture glass the coloring of which is very brilliant and effective. The high altar is enclosed by a very fine iron grille, ornamented with gilding and exceedingly lofty.

The retable or altar-screen was erected for Charles III by Lieutenant General Sabatino. It is of vast proportions and is composed of precious marbles of varied and exquisite colors. Another fine retable rises above the altar in the Chapel of Piety. It was designed by Juan de Juni in 1571 and represents the Deposition from the Cross. The trascoro—that part of the church between the entrance and the screen of the ritual choir in the middle of the nave—is adorned with delicately tinted marbles and the floor is paved with diamond-shaped blocks of the same material.

Among the artistic treasures in this church is a very fine painting of St Thomas by Alonzo Sanchez Coeleo, but it was much injured by a restoration from an incompetent hand in 1845.

There are a number of very fine monuments in the Segovia cathedral, including the mausoleums of several prelates and princes. One of these is the sarcophagus of the Infante Don Pedro—son of Enrique, or Henry II—who was killed at the age of nine years, owing to the carelessness of his nurse who let him fall from her arms from an upper window of the palace. Another contains the relics of the patron saint of Segovia, Santa Maria del Salto, St. Mary of the Leap, who died in 1237.

St. John Evangelist Church Discusses Ways And Means

Envelope Method of Collection and Advisability of Circulating Parish Magazine Occupy Attention of Vestry

At their first meeting of the year held in the church, with the vicar, Rev. W. E. Edmonds in the chair, the vestry of St. John the Evangelist Church considered ways and means whereby the church's financial obligations in 1929 could be successfully met.

The two main subjects of discussion were the envelope method of collection and the advisability of circulating the usual parish magazine this year. In connection with the envelope contributions, it was unanimously felt by the vestry that this system was the most successful, making the contributions more regular and systematical, and it was decided that a determined effort should be made this year to double the number of envelope subscribers.

With regard to the parish magazines the vicar voiced the opinion that, while subscriptions to this magazine were often neglected by the parishioners, yet this method of circulating church news was of too great a value to be discontinued, even if it was carried on at a small loss. In regard to this the vestry decided that with some little effort collections for this magazine could be effected.

Several other business items came up for discussion at the meeting, one of them being the annual apportionment for the church. As in other years this obligation had always been met, the vestry were sure that with the co-operation of the parish, this would also be the case in 1929. The first collection of voluntary giving falling due on February 10, letters have been mailed to the parishioners asking for their donations.

The date of the next meeting of the vestry has not yet been announced.

G. W. WHITE, Lecturer and Evangelist, now in Edmonton for a Series of Bible Lectures

Do the Dead Actually Appear?

The scientists of Europe and America are going in for Psychic Research. Such men as Sir Oliver Lodge and Sir A. Conan Doyle have pronounced Spiritualism "the Coming Science." Sir Conan Doyle goes so far as to say: "Spiritualism is the religion that is going to sweep the earth."

WOMAN HIRES BOY TO WRITE SUICIDE NOTE

Unable to Use Pen Herself, Gets Son's Chum to Indite

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Mrs. Ernestine Maser, 38, of No. 364 Fairmount avenue, Newark, could not write. When her husband John came home from work Wednesday night he found her dead, a gas tube in her mouth. Near her lay a pen-written will. The police were puzzled as to how a woman who could not write could have left a suicide note with her name signed to it.

After questioning 35 persons living in the neighborhood, the police learned from Peter Anselmo, 12, of No. 353 Fairmount avenue, that he had written the note.

"I thought she was just making a will," the lad said. Mrs. Maser's note said:

"Give all my property to my two younger children, do not leave my husband or my oldest daughter see my body. ERNESTINE MASER."

Peter went over to the Maser house after coming home from school afternoon to play with Charles Maser, seven. He said Mrs. Maser sent Charles out to play, telling him to stop running in and out bothering her. She asked Peter to write for her.

She criticized his penmanship, and tore up severel uncompleted notes. He had trouble especially with her first name, "Ernestine," which she wished written with the utmost neatness.

When he at last made a satisfactory draft, he said, Mrs. Maser gave him a quarter and bade him flippantly to run along and spend it.

The will is worthless, as it was not properly witnessed.

BESTS POISON IN HARD FIGHT

Nebraska Farmer Bitten by Snake Uses Heroic Measures

SCHUYLER, Neb., Feb. 9.—Alden Moural has won his fight with death by snake poison.

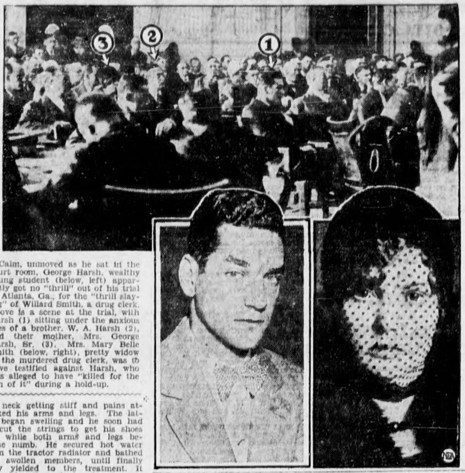
While plowing recently he stopped to grease the tractor, and as his hand rested on the ground a copperhead thrust its fang through his glove. The leather was so thick that the snake was unable to release its fang, and immediately wrapped itself around Moural's arm.

Moural hurriedly pulled out his handkerchief and wound it about the reptile's head. He tied the kerchief tightly so that it could not again attack when freed and pried apart its jaws, which had a finger tightly in their grip.

Moural discovered that the finger had been bitten. Killing the snake, he got a pair of pliers out of the tool box and clamped these on the finger to interrupt the circulation of the blood. He slashed his finger with a knife and sucked out the blood and poison from the wound. He had heard that the application to the wound of the body of the snake that had bitten its victim would aid in extracting the poison, so he cut the body into strips and tied some of these about the finger.

Within a short time Moural felt his neck getting stiff and pains attacked his arms and legs. The latter began swelling and he soon had to cut the strings to get his shoes off, while both arms and legs became numb. He secured hot water from the tractor radiator and bathed the swollen members, until finally they yielded to the treatment. It took him three hours, however, to walk and creep home, where medical aid was obtained. He is now back at work again.

"Thrill Killer" Gets No Thrill Out Of His Trial



Calm, unmoved as he sat in the court room, George Harsh, wealthy young student (below, left) apparently got no "thrill" out of his trial in Atlanta, Ga., for the "thrill slaying" of Willard Smith, a drug clerk. Above is a scene at the trial, with Harsh (1) sitting under the anxious eyes of a brother, W. A. Harsh (2), and their mother, Mrs. George Harsh, Sr. (3). Mrs. Mary Belle Smith (below, right), pretty widow of the murdered drug clerk, was to have testified against Harsh, who was alleged to have "killed for the fun of it" during a hold-up.

PARROT CALLS FOR ITS MAMA

Appears as Witness in Court Case—Costs Defendant $25

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—"Baby", a green parrot of uncertain age but of fixed opinions, cost John Slovick $25 today when the bird appeared in municipal court as a witness in a case in which Mrs. Olympia Blair, a former roomer in Slovick's flat, claimed her landlord refused to give up her parrot when she moved. Slovick said the parrot was his.

"Well," said Judge Harry B. Hamlin, "let's hear what the parrot has to say."

Baby Is Uncovered

A black cloth was removed from "baby's" cage. "Baby" cast a wicked eye at the judge, ruffled his feathers and said nothing.

"Hello Baby," called Mrs. Blair.

"Hello mama—hello mama—hello mama," rattled "Baby" enthusiastically.

Mrs. Blair knocked on the judge's bench with her knuckles.

"Come right in—come right in—come right in," invited "Baby" hospitably.

"Now, Mr. Slovick you try it," invited the court.

"Hello Baby," said Mr. Slovick, extending a finger in greeting.

Jabs At Finger

"Qr-rrk," responded "baby", miscalculating as it made a vicious jab at the finger.

"Pretty Polly—I mean Baby," coaxed Mr. Slovick.

"Baby" turned its back and winked at Mrs. Blair.

"Twenty-five dollars and costs, Mr. Slovick," remarked the court.

"Good bye—good bye—good bye," screamed "Baby", ruffling its feathers at the judge as Mr. Slovick paid up.

TAXI-CABS AND VICE

A Suggestion for Betterment, of Vital Interest to Every Clean Minded Man and Woman in Edmonton!

The revolting conditions as found in the recent vice ring clean-up are familiar to all. There is not one clean minded citizen in the whole City who would not be willing to do something in order to help remedy these conditions right from the basic cause.

WITH THIS THOUGHT IN MIND THE FOLLOWING SUGGESTIONS ARE PRESENTED FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION: SOLELY AND WHOLLY IN THE INTERESTS OF A CLEANER AND BETTER EDMONTON.

It is an easy matter to compute figures that will give the city council the number of taxicabs which can suitably and adequately take care of all the legitimate taxicab business in the city. When this is done, we would suggest that the city grant franchises to only so many taxicab companies as are needed to take care of this business. We are of the opinion that five companies, four on the north side and one on the south side, can take care of the whole of the taxicab business of the city.

Conditions of the franchise would make each owner responsible for the conduct of his drivers and the legitimate operation of his business.

Under this system an operator would value his franchise too such an extent that he would not dare take a chance of losing the concession granted.

As a further safeguard let each company be given a distinctive and individual color scheme and be known by the color alloted, such as :

CHECKERED CAB CO. DIAMOND CAB CO.
RED TOP CAB CO. YELLOW CAB CO.
BLACK AND WHITE CAB CO.

or such other colors as may be selected. Each car to have in addition to the color, the name of the company and the number of the cab painted plainly on the side of the body. With this regulalion in force a close and immediate check of all Taxi-Cabs could be made in case of accident or when engaged in any illegal business. Under present conditions cases have arisen where the city police have found it necessary to wait from Saturday night until the Government license office opened Monday morning before being able to ascertain the owner of a car on which information was wanted.

As another safeguard to the public and probably the most important factor in eliminating the conditions which have existed, a meter system, regulated by the city, should be installed on each Taxi-Cab, so that all companies would be operating on a fair basis. This would prevent price cutting and Taxi wars and would enable each employer to make a reasonable profit while at the same time pay his drivers a decent living wage.

Ample protection to the public, in case of accident, is a vital factor in the operation of all classes of transportation and this can only be guaranteed if the owner is assured of a fair return on the capital invested, which is all any operator hopes for in a field of fair competition.

Please bear in mind that this company makes no suggestion as to whom franchises should be granted. That is a matter solely at the discretion of the civic authorities and must be left entirely in their hands for final decision.

EVERY CITIZEN OF EDMONTON WANTS TO SEE A BETTER AND CLEANER CITY—EACH OF US IS EAGER TO DO OUR PART IN PROTECTING THE GIRLHOOD OF THE COMMUNITY.

IF YOU ENDORSE THE ABOVE SUGGESTIONS SIGN YOUR NAME TO THE COUPON BELOW AND FORWARD IT TO MAYOR BURY TODAY.

Canadians From Many Parts Attend Ottawa State Drawing Room

Beautiful Women and Prominent Men Pay Respects to Their Excellencies

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—From the far corners of the dominion, there were gathered Friday evening, people who paid their respects to Their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Viscountess Willingdon. From grey-haired statesmen to youthful debutantes, one and all bowed to the representative of the crown in Canada, when Their Excellencies held the state drawing room in the stately senate chamber of the parliament building.

The interior of the senate chamber was a study in brilliance, color and smartness. The presentations were made in a formal dignified manner and the lovely gowns worn by the ladies who attended were the last word in style and richness of material. Black and white were the leading color favorites in frocks.

Trains were very popular, falling from the shoulders in real court fashion, or the smart new short train that forms a part of the skirt. The debutantes all wore white and silver or pale flesh pink, choosing chiffon or the varied forms of crepe for their frocks.

Her Excellency wore a shimmering gown of rare material with long court train, held by two smart pages.

United Church Women Urge That City Be Made Safe Place For Youth To Live

Edmonton Presbyterial in Convention Friday Deplores Vice Conditions—Accepts Allocation of $11,345

Deploring vice conditions recently brought to light in the city, and expressing appreciation for what has already been done, the Edmonton Presbyterial of the United Church of Canada, representing a group of 1,179 women, passed a resolution urging that the work go on until the city was a safe place for youth, at the session on Friday afternoon in Central United church. In reaffirming its stand for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the convention deplored the fact that in the recent vice trials in the city clean-up a man was acquitted because he was drunk, while others guilty of the same crime were sentenced.

Mrs. Miller

Expressing sympathy with the peace movement throughout women's organizations in Canada, it was decided to urge the Alberta branch of the Presbyterial to cooperate with other women's organizations in taking steps to work for peace. The Edmonton Public School Board will be petitioned to set aside May 18 as International Good-will Day in the schools, and the Alberta Branch of the Presbyterial will be asked to request the Minister of Education to give effect to the proposal of Good-will Day observance throughout the schools of the province. A further resolution seeks such free text books as it is possible to get from the department of education for the United church mission schools in the province.

Increase In Giving

The president addressed the meeting in a very interesting manner, thanking the members for their support of the year just past. She spoke of the increase of systematic giving, through which the individual average was $8 a year. Mrs. Archer gave a comprehensive resume of the dominion board meeting held in Toronto in June.

The year's allocation was set at $11,345. The corresponding secretary Mrs. Robert Leslie, reported 576 annual members and 331 life members making a total of 907 senior members of the Presbyterial. Over 200 meetings were held in the 22 branches throughout the year. The increased popularity and success of the envelope giving system was outlined by Mrs. H. Dobson, Christian stewardship superintendent.

A membership of 487 in mission bands and baby bands was reported by Mrs. Kellner. There are twenty of the former and seven of the latter. The sum of $963.12 was raised. Mrs. J. H Slack, supply secretary, reported supplies to the value of $663.65 sent to Lamont hospital, the Ruthenian Home, Duffield, Ashmont, and Buchanan Institute.

Mrs. Boulton, Mrs. Ottewell, Mrs Tuttle, Mrs Ramsay, Mrs. Bond and Mrs. Samis were members of the nominating committee, and Mrs. Dobson, Mrs. Charles McDonald and Mrs. K W. McKenzie were in charge of finances. Mr. Thompson, of Robertson Church, was re-appointed auditor. Mrs. W. D. Ramsey and Mrs. W. H Sterne were appointed branch delegates to Calgary, with Mrs. Berry and Mrs. Fred Richards as alternatives.

250 Enjoy Banquet

Following the afternoon session about 250 delegates and visitors enjoyed a banquet at which the various United Church Missionary Societies of the city were hostesses. Rev. and Mrs W. H. Pike, Rev. and Mrs. Woodsworth Miss McDonald, the Misses Coutie, Miss Kinghorn, Mrs. J. E. Duclos were introduced as actively interested in home missions. Mrs. Adam (Presbyterian), Mrs. Bolton (Baptist), and Mrs. Leversedge (Church of England) brought greetings.

Mrs. W. T. Ash introduced Miss Lily Wong, Chinese medical student at the University of Alberta, and Miss Cheyo Kubo, graduate of Lamont hospital and nurse at the University hospital, who spoke briefly of their appreciation of the work of the missionary societies. The Rev. Mr. Mitchell brought greetings from the Presbytery. Miss Betty May was the soloist, and Mr. Llewellyn Weeks gave readings.

In the evening Miss Mitchell, field superintendent of missions in eastern Canada, who had spoken on the foreign mission work in the afternoon, told in stirring fashion of the home mission work in Canada. The great service being done by United Church hospitals, mission homes and schools throughout the Dominion was told in a very touching manner. Mrs. Brink and Mrs. K J. Mitchell sang duets.

Mrs. A. D. Miller was re-elected president of the Edmonton Presbyterial of the United Church of Canada at the third annual meeting in Central United church on Friday. Other officers for the coming year are: Vice-Presidents, Mrs. J. A. Caldwell, Mrs. R. H. Dobson, Mrs. S. M. Bolton; recording secretary, Mrs. W. H. Facey; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. Colwill; treasurer, Mrs. George Riach; secretary of Christian Stewardship and Finance, Mrs. W. Connolly; Young Women, Mrs. R. Jenkin; Mission and Baby Bands, Mrs. D. F. Kellner; Associate Helper, Mrs. M. Ingram; Supply secretary, Mrs. J. H. Slack; Strangers' secretary, Mrs. E. M. Watson; Literature secretary, Mrs. A. E. Ottewell; Missionary Monthly, Mrs. C. E. Elliott; Temperance, Mrs. P. J. Rowe; Press, Mrs. S. Williamson; C.G.I.T., Mrs. W. Gaetz.

Will Alberta Women Roll Back the Dark Clouds of Prejudice

The supreme court of Canada has decided, after long and deliberate debate, that woman is not a person; but it may yet be given to the women of Alberta to roll back the dark clouds of prejudice and unfairness, said Mr. Boyd McBride in addressing the Women's Institute at the Y. W. C. A. on Friday evening on "Is Woman a Person?" The early Christian church did all in its power to restrict the rights of woman, said the speaker. Women in Alberta are the first in the British Empire to claim the right to be termed persons. In 24 or 25 of the statutes of this province women are in absolute equality with men. Five judges sitting in Edmonton declared that women are indeed persons, and so we have a woman police magistrate.

But the battle must be carried on still further, he affirmed, and the matters pertaining to the rights of women taken to Ottawa. He felt that the Senate should accept women appointees.

A test case was started by five women in Alberta and taken to the supreme court of Canada in an endeavor to prove that women are persons. It took 28 pages of fine print to prove that as far as the Senate are concerned woman is not a person. The speaker closed by saying that it was the right of every free born woman to not only obey the laws, but to help frame them.

"Undergrad" Climax Of Social Season in University Circles

"The Undergrad," famous annual affair, officially called the Undergraduate Reception, has again passed into the University's social history. This event, which attracts graduates and visitors from all over Alberta, as well as from British Columbia and Saskatchewan, is the most popular of the year. Over six hundred guests were in attendance. The patronesses were Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Howes, Mrs. Wyatt, Mrs. MacGregor Smith, and Miss Dodd.

It is always expected that the decorative scheme of the Undergrad should be strikingly brilliant and unusual, but last night's was the most distinctive the writer has ever seen. As the function was staged this year by the Agricultural Club, the decorations were chosen on a rural motif, and were extremely beautiful. The lounges were done over to resemble seductive rural arbors, covered with flowers and vines, and their charm was enhanced by the effect of colored lights and inviting piles of cushions. The main hall was fringed with very cleverly made artificial apple trees in blossom, and the far wall was covered with a huge beautiful painting of a rural scene. The orchestra was enclosed in another delightful rose-covered arbor. The dance programs were very appropriate, being neatly designed to represent the folding doors of a large barn. Suppers were served in the large gymnasium adjoining the hall, and it too was beautifully decorated.

The dance executive, to whom the thanks for the success of the reception are due, consisted of Don Cameron, A. McCalla, S. G. Thomson, Herb O'Brien, W. E. Bowser, F. Wintemute, and J. C. Hide.

Hundreds Attend Opening of Gayest Of Winter Carnivals

Eclipsing all former winter carnivals in brilliance the program presented by members of Glenora Skating Club, at the Rotary Club Carnival on Friday, opening night, was one long to be remembered by the hundreds of people in attendance.

The music was excellent and the orchestra under the leadership of Mr. Holden Rushworth of the Edmonton Symphony orchestra was at all times in perfect rythm with the clever and versatile skaters. In many of the solo numbers the Arena was in complete darkness except for a great spot light which followed the graceful skaters as they glided from one end of the ice to the other.

Mrs. Verna Myles and Mrs. Jack Starky, wearing costumes of the softest pink velvet, were lovely in a waltz scene, and Mr. and Mrs. Starky were most alluring in solo.

The Glenora Club eight, who last week had the honor of winning first place at the Banff Winter Carnival, were cheered as they appeared in the Spanish scene. The soloists in this scene were Mrs. Starky and Mr. Olaf Anderson, professional, who gave a remarkable performance of the Spanish Tango. There was not a pause in the program from beginning to end.

Among those who attended were Mr. and Mrs. H. M. E. Evans, Mr. Sydney B. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. William Dick, Mr and Mrs. Percy Abbott, Dr. and Mrs. Claude Jamieson, Miss Maddock, Colonel and Mrs. Leonard C Harris, Mr. and Mrs. George Hunt, Mr Norton Ferris, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rheumatic Pains Due to Thin Blood

Relief Comes Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The most a rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the swollen, aching joints is a little relief, and all the while the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted. It is now known that rheumatism is rooted in the blood, and that as the trouble goes on the blood becomes still further thin and watery. To get rid of rheumatism, therefore, you must go to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved so beneficial when taken for this trouble. They make new, rich blood which expels the poisonous acid and the rheumatism disappears.

There are thousands of former rheumatic sufferers in Canada, now well and strong, who thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that they are now free from the aches and pains of this dreaded trouble. One of these, Mrs. W. F. Tait, McKellar, Ont., who says: "I am only too willing to tell you of the great benefits I have received from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After lying in bed for seven weeks suffering untold agony with inflammatory rheumatism, I finally came through the use of this medicine. I could not move in bed only as they lifted me, and I could only sleep when opiates were given me. The medical treatment I was taking seemed of no avail. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and soon I began to get relief. After taking some time the rheumatism was banished and I have never felt better in my life. It is several years since this happened and I have had no return of the trouble since. I might add that I recommended the pills to two of my friends who were suffering with rheumatism and the pills were equally effective in both cases."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion or nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It Was a Laugh

The Bulletin's Daily Short Story from Real Life

By MARTIN SOMMERS

Conningsby Clifton, the first of his line to wander beyond the pale of the practice of law, viewed the monstrosity in the mirror with obvious disgust. It was not the image of Conningsby Clifton. It was the image of Kayo Clifford, the nom de bum Conningsby Clifton assumed when he left Harvard to seek a quick fortune in what is erroneously known as the ring

It has once been a face. That had been before petty pillows pumped by steely arms left it puffy and blue around the half-closed eyes, the lips shredded, one ear blooming into a balloon, and one cheek perforated by a tooth that afterward had taken French leave.

"I uess this washes me up," mumbled Kayo Clifford painfully to Lockjaw Tracy, his manager—so named because the only time his jaws were not working at rapid-fire conversation was when they were masticating.

"Don't be a sap, big boy—don't be a sap—I say don't be dumb, don't be a sap," Lockjaw pattered along. He seldom said anything once—or just anything.

"Just cause the challenger—or near challenger—outpoints you one here in the sticks where nobody will hear about it anyway? Yoh just had a bad night—it could happen to a champ. You'll take him next time like Tunney took Shakespeare.

"Geest, don't you think Dempsey ever took it on the chin? . . . I know you got the guts, kid . . . That's all you need . . . If you got the guts that's all you need. Don't worry about this Boots Levinsky. He was fighting out of his head tonight.

"Say—nobody's goin' to know about this anyhow. You was robbed, no kiddin'. I wired all the sports writers in the big town how you won by a mile, but was robbed by this referee here. I wired the boys in Chi you got the nod. So watta yuh worryin' about?"

Unhearing half of Lockjaw's spiel—a monologue that long before had lost its charm for Kayo Clifford—the fighter held his aching head in his long hands and waited for the manager to leave.

The Real Reason

To tell the truth Conningsby Clifton was fed up. He didn't like, really, to be pounded around a ring while hundreds—fat men, brassy women, and spindling youths—bayed at him He didn't like to let go with that snaky right of his time after time—pounding [illegible] poor halfwit to a pulp He didn't [illegible] to run five miles every day and [illegible] a foolish bag around. He hated the fight racket.

Then why?

The big why was Mary Josephine Bartram, of the Philadelphia Bartrams. It happened that Conningsby Clifton loved Mary Josephine with a love that was blind to everything except the vision of a bright little breakfast room with Mary Josephine at the other end of a table and a babbling Conningsby Clifton jr. in a high chair on one side.

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR VALUABLES LEFT IN DRESSING ROOMS
FRIDAY
McNERNEY '28

"I guess this washes me up," mumbled Kayo Clifford painfully.

Mary Josephine Bartrams are legion. Mary's family lost its money as they say. What was left all went to make Mary Josephine about as expensive, pampered, charming, accomplished, cruel, thoughtless, scatterbrained a young beauty as you could meet anywhere.

So, obviously, it was necessary for her to marry somebody rich enough to keep her that way. Conningsby Clifton, whose family had lost its money, too, knew that only too well. You see, Mamma Clifton was planning a money marriage for her Conningsby.

It was not altogether necessary for Necessity, in Conningsby's case, to give birth to that brilliant daughter, Invention. His was a very simple problem.

Hadn't he been intercollegiate heavyweight champion for a year and runner-up for two previous years? Hadn't he been told that he was clever enough to beat nine out of ten professionals? And hadn't he been terrible at math, languages, history, sciences—to say nothing of such snap courses . . Business and Public Administration?

That was why one moonlight night as they were winding along the banks of the Charles river in a motor car, Conningsby Clifton had combined a proposal that Miss Bartram change her name to Mrs. Clifton with a proposal that Conningsby Clifton change his to Kayo Clifford.

Now Mary Josephine had always rather fancied that she would love one of those big brutal men. The romance of it. Her gladiator, her man, her primeval brute pounding men to pieces with his fists—and all for her.

"Darling," she had said on that occasion, "it is wonderful. I shall wait for you, my own champion?"

"But you'll forget," he said in a manner that indicated clearly he really didn't thing she would.

"When I've collected my quota of quashed noses and cauliflower ears, you'll elope with some unscarred bond man, won't you?"

Of course she wouldn't—"you foolish old Connie."

And so on and on, through the wee sma' hours that survived the night. At any rate, when they parted in a lingering embrace Connie Clifton was convinced that he was perhaps the luckiest and happiest man in the world. And Mary Josephine Bartram was thinking

"How thrilling. Imagine Connie fighting—knocking out people. And all for me. Think of what the girls will say. Of course, I don't dare tell anybody except Julie and Doris and Grace

"Just think if he would get to be a regular Jack Dempsey. And to think that I'd be the wife of the heavyweight champion of the world. Well!"

Memories of that evening, and the dreary weeks of pounding that followed raced through Kayo Clifford's aching head as he slipped from the side door of the athletic club unobserved. He had neatly eluded Lockjaw Tracy. Tonight he wanted to be alone.

For hours beneath a black sky he trudged the sidewalks aimlessly. His buckling legs and throbbing head didn't seem to matter. What was the point of going to the hotel? To write Mary Josephine that he'd been slapped silly. Slight chance of there being a letter from her. Recently her letters had said less and less of their plans and more and more of the parties and gossip at home in the east.

"Come on, son, move along!"

A kindly policeman's formal admonition brought Kayo Clifford to consciousness with a snap. He found himself standing on a corner near a railroad station in a dingy section of town.

"So I look like a bum too, do I?" he mused as his legs obeyed the command mechanically. But his head came up with a jerk and his neck stiffened.

"Quitter . . . quitter . . . quitter," he said harshly to himself. "So you were running out? Just because you felt so damned sorry for yourself you were taking it on the run for the railroad station

"You'd make a fine champion or husband or father or anything else you would."

Swinging those tired legs with new briskness, Conningsby Clifton headed for the other side of town and his hotel. As he passed a mirrored, white-tiled restaurant the odor of food assailed his ears. He realized he was hungry

Genuine Scorn

Inside the restaurant a noisy group of hangers-on from the ring world encircled the three large tables in the rear discussing the fight tempestuously.

A hush was followed by:

"Hello, Kayo . . . Tough luck, Kayo . . . You'll get him next time, Kayo . . . Come on over."

Half-heartedly Conningsby Clifton mumbled a greeting.

With a slight apology, he seated himself alone at a table near the door. He was the cynosure of the restaurant. Theatrical folk tired from the three-a-day, business men enjoying a night out, collegians with their girls from a dance—all watched him in silence for a few moments

He felt his battered face acutely. He looked up as a waitress in starched white approached.

She was the one human being in the place, Conningsby Clifton felt as he looked into her liquid brown eyes Her long, flaky brown hair, straggling from beneath her jaunty white cap, and her thin features, with aquiline nose, contrasted sharply with the pond of beefy faces and thick bodies around her.

The fighter was surprised at the mixture of contempt and pity he saw in her face and even in the rigid lines of her figure as she stood there to await his command. Attention had shifted from them after the brief stare of curiosity. The restaurant once more hummed with animated conversation.

"What's the matter—tired?" said Conningsby.

"Not particularly — what'll you have?" the girl asked rather severely.

Conningsby Clifton was surprised. Most waitresses he had known would have welcomed the chance to indulge in a mild flirtation with Kayo Clifford. The loneliness that had oppressed him mildly for weeks suddenly became poignant suffering. He felt he must know this girl.

He made another sally only to stub his tongue on that metallic "what'll you have?" Youthful pique and fatigue flamed into an outburst:

"Say, what's the idea?" he demanded, too angry to go in for repartee. "I'm not any drugstore cowboy, you know. I'm not trying to buy you a bracelet of diamonds or anything. Say, you don't have to be so insulted just because I ask you a question."

Those brown eyes grew ever so scornful and ever so cold.

"No, I know that, Mr. Clifford," the girl said calmly. "I don't object to giving you cakes and coffee, Mister Clifford. But just because you're a cheap pug that makes a living by making a beast of yourself and a beast out of other men, don't expect me to fall over your neck. I don't go out with guys like you, see?"

Kayo took the count. It was a laugh, he reflected when he came to. Here he was, Conningsby Clifton, blueblood and accepted suitor of Mary Josephine Bartram scorned by a cheap and rather vulgar waitress because he was a professional boxer—merely indulging in a profitable lark. It was a laugh

But he could not put that laugh out of his mind as, after managing to win a reluctant smile from the icy waitress, he meandered to his hotel He was rather annoyed when he found an anxious Lockjaw Tracy pacing the lobby. He was more annoyed when Tracy spouted:

"Geest, everything's okay, kid. I got you all but signed for the garden with Gunner Slattery for three weeks tomorrow. The Gunner's a set-up for you. He'll come right in and take it and get it."

Imagine Lockjaw's surprise when his five-star meal ticket replied:

"Well, maybe. But for the next three days I'm going to stay right here in this hotel and rest up"

"In this dump!"

"Yes—right here"

A Real Knockout

That was a surprise, but not anything like the surprise Lockjaw, still "in this dump," got a week later when Kayo Clifford, the most promising bum he ever handled, firmly announced he was through with the ring and would marry Dolly McCaffrey, waitress, the next day.

Lockjaw's surprise was equaled only by Kayo Clifford's Harvard classmates.

"Connie Clifton?" they'd say. "Yes, it's very strange about him. He went west and married some impossible girl and now they say he's running a restaurant."

Poor Mary Josephine Bartram? Well, don't feel too sorry for her. Remember, you read about the sensation it caused when she, social registered and all, married Gunner Slattery, heavyweight champion of the world, who had come up from the gutter?

THE END.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am a man just past 35 years of age. I have a good position, and a nice savings account, and am seriously considering marriage, but I see so much domestic misery all around me that I hesitate to take the risk when I am so well off as a man.

Would marriage take away too much of a man's independence? Is the institution of marriage a success after all? E. A. B.

Answer:—

If you never went into any enterprise, Mr. E. A. B., until you found the one that was foolproof, you would spend your life sitting on the do-nothing stool twiddling your thumbs.

There is no field of human activity in which there are not plenty of failures. There are men who fail as preachers. Men who fail as lawyers. Men who fail as doctors. Men who fail as writers, as musicians. Men who fail as merchants, as bankers, as farmers, as clerks, and salesmen. Yet there are plenty of other men who make successes in every one of these occupations and professions.

You wouldn't refrain from taking a good job because you know a man who has been fired by his employer. Knowing that a corner grocery store is in the hands of a receiver wouldn't keep you out of the grocery trade. The fact that you know a doctor who is down and out wouldn't prevent you from studying medicine if you felt you had an aptitude for the profession.

Why, then, be scared of matrimony because you have run across some scrapping husbands and wives, and seen a number of marriages land on the scrap heap? You can no more argue that marriage is a failure because some men and women fail to make a go of it than you can argue that law is a failure or that the drygoods business is a failure because some lawyers have no clients, and some drygoods merchants go into bankruptcy.

Every marriage is an individual experiment and if it is a success or a failure, it brings happiness or misery, according to the amount of effort, good-will, patience and common sense that the high contracting parties put into it.

There is nothing the matter with the institution of marriage. The trouble is with the quitters who think that they should get everything and give nothing in return, and who throw up their hands and rush for the divorce courts when they find out that marriage means work, and worry, and sacrifice, instead of being a perpetual party.

So don't be afraid to take a chance on matrimony if you have found the right sort of a girl. At its worst it is a good sporting proposition, where you have a fifty-fifty chance of winning out, and if you do win out, you will find that in having a happy home with a devoted wife and children you have got the best thing that life can give a man.

Whereas, if you refrain from getting married because you are afraid to take the risk, you will find that life grows cold and empty, and dreary and lonely, with no close family ties to keep the heart warm. The truth of the old adage that nothing venture, nothing have, is never better exemplified than in marriage

Undoubtedly marriage does deprive a man of much of his freedom. When he takes upon himself the responsibilities of wife and children he gives hostages to fortune, and he is no longer free to follow his own inclinations as a bachelor is.

The bachelor may roam where he lists. The married man is nailed to his job because he has a family to support. The bachelor may do as he pleases. The married man must do as his wife pleases and consider her tastes and inclinations before his own. The bachelor may come home any old time, and spend his evenings disporting himself with the boys. The married man must be a fireside companion, and feel himself lucky to get one evening out a week.

Undoubtedly matrimony puts a crimp in a man's liberty, but no man has a right to get married unless he is willing to lay his freedom on the altar of matrimony, and make his bondage a willing bondage.

DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am a man of 30 in love with a widow of 38, who has four children. I want to marry her, but she thinks my mother would not approve of it. Why should my mother object? K. M. T.

Answer:

Your mother would probably object because she would think that you were going out of your way to hunt for trouble in taking such a big ready-made family on your shoulders.

It takes a lot of money to feed, and clothe, and educate four children, and take out their tonsils, and straighten their teeth, and get them all the doodabs that the modern youngsters seem to require. And while a man may really enjoy doing this for his own children, it is something else again, Mawruss, when it is slaving for another man's children.

If you have the high and heroic spirit that prompts you to sell yourself into slavery for the sake of love, go to it. A widow with four children needs help, and here's hoping that somebody will pin a hero's medal on your breast. You will deserve it.

Little Stories For Bedtime

The Herald of Mistress Spring

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

(Copyright)

Peter Rabbit was sitting in the middle of the Dear Old Brier Patch. Jolly round, red Mr. Sun had just begun his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky, and Peter was wondering where he would go and what he would do when he heard a sound that caused him to suddenly sit up very straight with both ears pointing up to the sky. Peter held his breath for a minute and then he heard it again. This time he jumped straight up in the air and kicked his heels together for joy. It was just the softest, sweetest whistle! It wasn't merry and it wasn't sad: it was just beautiful. And it seemed to come from everywhere and nowhere—just out of the air.

"Winsome Bluebird!" cried Peter Rabbit. "Oh, it's Winsome Bluebird! I wonder where he is! He sounds a long way off and yet he may be close by. Oh, I do wonder if I'm the first one to hear him!"

"I guess you are, Peter," said a soft voice. "I guess you are, because you see I've just arrived and I came straight to the Old Briar Patch, because I just knew that you would be looking for me and I wanted you to have the pleasure of being the first to see me. Why don't you look up in the little cherry tree over your head Peter, and say something."

"Oh, Winsome, I'm so glad you've got here at last."

Of course, Peter felt very foolish, and he looked just as he felt, as he saw Winsome Bluebird sitting right over his head. You see that soft, beautiful voice had seemed to come from everywhere, and Peter hadn't been able to tell just where it did come from.

"Oh, Winsome!" he cried. "Oh, Winsome, I'm so glad you've got here at last! I'm so happy I could sing for joy."

"Ho, ho, Peter!" laughed Winsome Bluebird. "Do try it. I should love to hear you sing."

Peter grinned. "Well, any way, if I can't sing I can dance," he cried and right away began the funniest little dance that ever was. Finally he had to stop to get his breath. "There that's how glad I am!" he cried. "Now tell me all the news, Winsome."

"Oh, I couldn't, Peter. I couldn't tell you all. There's too much to tell and I haven't got time now. You know there are others waiting for me."

"But do tell me if Mistress Spring is most here," begged Peter.

"Of course she is! Don't you know I am her herald? I've come all the way up from down south just ahead of her to tell everybody that she is coming. You know that is what a herald is for. I would rather be the herald of Mistress Spring than anything else in all the world." Winsome half lifted his beautiful blue wings as he said this.

"Don't go!" cried Peter. "I guess I know how you feel. It must be perfectly splendid to make everybody glad and happy as you do. I—I wish I could be a herald."

Winsome Bluebird laughed the sweetest laugh. "I guess you don't need to be a herald to make people glad to see you, Peter," he said. "Besides you know you can be a sort of a herald by telling everybody you meet that I am here."

"That's so!" Peter cried. "That's one reason I like to be the first to see or hear you. It's great fun to see how pleased everybody is when they know that you have arrived. I—I hope nothing will happen to make Mistress Spring late."

BENVENUTO CELLINI is today perhaps best known of all the old masters of the sixteenth century to art lovers. He was undoubtedly the greatest goldsmith the world ever produced, and was equally as famous as a sculptor. Cellini lived a remarkable life, filled with thrilling adventures that read like highly imaginative fiction. "The Life of Benvenuto Cellini" is perhaps the most widely read of all the Harvard Classics. He is remembered as a wicked man, for all his genius, and it was he, who, according to his own account, killed both the Constable and the Prince of Orange. HR

City Building Program Shows Total of $6,000,000

Around the Town

Might Need It
Be Prepared
Believe It or Not Earlie Up

By W. A. do Graves

Bob Parkyn, the voluable and always amiable labor member for Calgary left for the home city over the week-end with a man's sized job on his hands, if what Davie Duggan, Edmonton Conservative member says is true.

In the seat arrangements at the legislature Mr. Duggan is in close proximity to Mr. Parkyn, so close, in fact, that he can read the titles of the piles of books that the labor member insists on bringing from the legislative library on any and every occasion, and can hear even the smallest "H" dropped by the genial Bob when he really gets into oratorical action, so that when Mr. Duggan says he heard this without the shadow of a doubt, there can be no gainsaying it.

On Thursday Mr. Parkyn rose in his seat in the house and caught the eye of Mr. Speaker, and in parliamentary language he "begged leave, Mr. Speaker, to introduce a petition.". Clasped in Robert's hand was the petition, and quite plainly it was labelled "An act to amend the charter of the City of Calgary," but Mr. Duggan is ready to swear, and he is backed up by every other member who heard Mr. Parkyn, that what the genial gentleman from Calgary said was "I beg leave, Mr. Speaker, to introduce a petition, and it is, an act to amend the characters of the citizens of Calgary."

All of which explains why Mr. Parkyn left for the South on Friday night to do a man's size job of explaining.

Hon. Vernor W. Smith, minister of railways and telephones, is qualified to take the Boy Scouts oath if "Be Prepared" is anything to go by. So far this session he has successfully piloted two bills past second reading without having to make a speech, but perhaps it was the fact that he let it be known he was all ready to answer any questions asked that decided the members that none were necessary.

"I had all the facts ready for the boys if they asked for them, but as nobody did I didn't think it was any use stirring up anything," he said as he carried a voluminous bundle of papers back to his office.

But the Minister will not get off so easily when he introduces the Railway legislation dealing with the disposal of the E.D. & B.C. and the A. & G.W. and will probably lead off in the debate which this bill is expected to produce. It isn't often that Hon. Mr. Smith is heard in a full dress debate, but what he says is listened to, and although he attempts no flowery flights of oratory, he usually gets his message across.

The worst story I heard today was told by George Findlay, the manager of the Empire theatre.

George believes in getting the reaction of his patrons to all the shows, and on one occasion, when the theatre he was managing was playing a well-known stock company, he made a point of strolling through the lobby as the audience was leaving. One of the members of the company was a very portly actor, and in one play took the part of a talkative travelling man with great success. At least George says he was a success, for as he was walking through the lobby he heard two enthusiastic salesgirls discussing the play.

"Isn't that man that plays the part of 'Big Ed' a peach. I've seen him in every show," said one fair enthusiast. "Gee, he's certainly got a big repertoire."

"Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that," said the other, "but he is fat."

Ye Diarie
(February 8)

Earlie up, suche a clatter the alarum clocke makes this daye, and suche a guiltie conscious be mine that I must hie me to the boulevardes before my lovelie dove thinks to aske me what time I arrive home, such low raffish companie I keepe last nighte, but Lorde! she points out that my time-piece be on the floore and my spats under the pillow, so that I muste explaine, the which I do, saying that I have made a wager of 1 shilling with Sir Joseph Adair that I will do this for one weeke, but Heaven helpe me, it be but a poore childish effort, so that I muste listen to a lengthie leckture in which it is predicted that I will come to no goode ende, and so be it I keep up this roystering. But to remembering that this be the daye the ghoste walkes at the printery, so that the world look mightie magnolius, and I to carolling gailie until anon a dread thought doth strike me that this be the daye an instalment be due, but Lorde! whether it be the third instalment on the musick box, or the seventh instalment on the electrique stove, or the fifth instalment on the radio, I know not, and so to worrying mightilie until I recolleckt that it makes naught of a difference, I having given the chancellor of the exchequer so manie I.O.U's this weeke that I have not the pennies to pay an installment on a microbe's corn-plaster. And so, singing merrilie, to the printery, where all daye at my scrivening, and there comes Milord Shute, the High Constable, Sir Jimmie Reilly, the financier, Sir Joseph Adair, Milord "Watty" Watt of the printery, Sir Joseph Tyrrell, the engraver, and the Colonel Chas. Ruttan from Winnipeg, and I to talking with this one and that one, with merrie quips and passing gaye badinage so that I do little worke this fine morning until it be time to join the Three Houres for Lunch clubbe, the whiche I do.

And to lunching, after whiche againe to the printery and all daye at my stint, until it be time to return home with the payroll, but how I will explaine its decimation I know not. So to home, but my Dame be not there, the whiche pleases me mightilie so that I make haste to depart for the boulevardes again, returning at a layte houre, such great goode judgment I showe, and so smart I be. But Heigho! there is always the morrow. And so to bed.

Here are estimates of the various amounts involved in the major units of the potential program: Government legislative buildings, $500,000; Normal school, $500,000; Lombardy apartments, $1,250,000; Dairy Pool building, $30,000; Woodward's store extensions, $100,000; Royal Alexandra hospital extension and nurses' home, $290,000; extensions to the University hospital, $250,000; addition to No. 2 fire hall, $50,000; Edmonton Motors building, $100,000; Willingdon Apartments, $200,000; another apartment house on 109th street, $50,000; T. Old Timer Of North Is Sure Planes Will Stay

Flying Machines Are Putting Trips by Dog Team Out of Business, Says Visitor to Edmonton

The advent of the airplane in the north is going to put trips by dog teams out of business. They took 35 days to cover the same distance as the airplane does in about six hours, according to "Rags" Wilson, pioneer northman, who has arrived in the city after coming out from Simpson to Waterways with "Punch" Dickins, Western Canada Airways pilot. He is registered at the Macdonald

Wilson came out with Dickins on the first return trip of the big Fokker monoplane which came to grief as it landed at Fort Resolution, where it was held up for some days until repairs were made. The accident occurred on January 27.

According to Wilson the plane had landed and was skidding along the ice when it dropped over a drift which had been caused by high winds. The undercarriage was smashed and the plane skidded for quite a distance on the fuselage.

Dickins made the out trip from Simpson to Resolution in 2 hours and 50 minutes and from Resolution to Waterways, after the plane was repaired, in 2 hours and 40 minutes, the journey from Simpson to Waterways taking about 35 days by dog team

On the way out the plane passengers saw a herd of 100 buffalo near Peace Point. The buffalo were placed there some years ago by the government.

Course In Town Planning Will Be Held At 'Varsity

Edmonton lends itself in a most unusual way to the town-planner in order to enhance the natural beauty of its site," says Dr. R. C. Wallace, President of the University of Alberta

He adds that the appointment of a director of town-planning for the province is an indication of the interest that is being taken generally in the matter of planning and beautification of our cities, towns and farm surroundings.

In order to give everybody an opportunity to become acquainted with the views of Mr. H. Seymour, director of town planning, a course of town planning will be given in the University of Alberta, room 111, Arts building, on Tuesday afternoons at five o'clock, commencing February 12, and ending March 19. The lectures will be of a practical type, and of special interest to engineers, surveyors, architects, as well as the public at large. Mr. Seymour will discuss the history of the development of town planning, particulars that have to be kept in mind in the planning of towns and cities, the question of design in the sub-divisions of residential areas, and the relationship of architecture and landscape gardening to town planning

THIRTY ALARMS

"Thirty alarms were received by the city fire department during the week ending February 1, and 25 of these resulted from fires in which loss was incurred. Two of the fires during the week resulted in total losses," according to Fire Chief Albert Dutton.

Chinese Consul At Ottawa Honored by Local Countrymen

Making a tour of Canada prior to his taking up his duties as Chinese consul at Otawa, Chunhow H. Poo, arrived in Edmonton on Friday and was the guest of honor at a banquet tendered him by local Chinese on Friday evening.

In the course of an address Mr. Chunhow H. Poo outlined the work that is being accomplished in China for the betterment of conditions, and also the development that is taking place in the Orient. He stressed the fact that there was a great field for Alberta products in China, and that his country was looking for an avenue of export for Chinese work into this province.

While in the city Mr. Poo is making a complete study of the conditions under which his countrymen work in Edmonton, and also to gain a first-hand knowledge of the relations which exist between the general public and members of his nation

Over 700 Chinese were in attendance at the banquet, the Labor hall on 98 street, where the banquet was held, being far too small to accommodate the large turnout

President J. D. Mansfield and other officials of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada were guests at a private luncheon of the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Friday John Blue and Mayor A U. G. Bury were present while Ernest Watt, assistant manager of the Motordrome Ltd., was also a guest

May Now Place Tax On Single Trucks; Will Run To $100

Authorization of the imposition of a tax on individual trucks of commercial trucking companies up to $100, according to size, in addition to the tax of $35 each presently being paid may be provided for in an amendment to the Public Vehicles act introduced into the legislature on Friday afternoon by Hon. O. L. McPherson, minister of public works

In explaining the amendment, the minister stated that provision was made for a reclassification of vehicles and this would permit the government to levy taxes on these various classifications in an equitable manner. The government's intention was to impose no more than a nominal tax on such commercial trucks operating in cities

In further explanation the minister said that the operation in increasing numbers, of heavy trucks over provincial highways was causing heavy damage and rapid depreciation and the government was entitled to some form of redress

While the actual amount of the proposed tax had not been decided on, yet in view of the damage, he gave it as his opinion that up to $100 would be justifiable as in some states of the U. S. as high as $700 was levied.

W. W. Prevey, Liberal, Edmonton, submitted that many farmers hauled milk daily to the city over roads not maintained by the government. Some of these haul milk for other farmers and while they charge for it, could hardly be classed as commercial truckers. In reply the minister said the object of classifying trucks was to reach an equitable basis for taxation in just such instances

DISEASE SHOWS BIG INCREASE

Three Cases of Meningitis Reported to City M.H.O. Recently

With three cases of meningitis and one of the victims dead, and 155 cases of measles reported during the past week, communicable disease in Edmonton reached a total of 215 cases, compared to 167 the previous week, according to Dr. T. H. Whitelaw, city medical health officer.

Dr. Whitelaw stated that the three cases of meningitis were of children and the surviving two, while their condition was serious, hopes were held for their recovery. Until an official report, the doctor said he was unable to state whether the meningitis was of the epidemic type or otherwise.

Most of the measles reported during the past week were secondary cases occurring in families due to infection from the first case. Six deaths from measles with complications occurred last month, Dr. Whitelaw said.

Other diseases reported during the week were: diphtheria, one; scarlet fever, six; chickenpox, 10; mumps, 37; whooping cough, two; erysipelas, one.

NEW BUILDINGS SCHEDULED BY 'PHONES DEPT.

Total of $1,000,000 Will be Expended in 1929, Says Minister

Expansion of the plant, equipment and activities of the Alberta Government Telephones in Calgary will involve an expenditure covering a period up until 1933 of approximately $1,000,000, according to an announcement made by Hon. Vernor W. Smith, minister of railways and telephones.

The Minister's declaration came on being interviewed following the tabling in the legislature on Friday of the annual telephone department report in which expansion of activities in Calgary was mentioned.

The first item on the program is the construction of a new "main" building, to be erected behind the present one, on Sixth avenue, between Centre and First street west, the site now being owned by the department. There is a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of about 120 feet. The building will be three stories high for the present and provision will be made for three additional stories for a depth of 50 feet

In addition a new building will be erected at Drumheller with a complete automatic exchange in conjunction which will include the rurals.

Early next year it is expected to instal automatic equipment in the Red Deer building

This year new buildings also will be erected at Hanna, Halkirk, Grande Prairie, St. Paul de Metis and possibly one other point, all of them being the same type as those erected at Vermilion and High River

The Calgary Trail Community League will hold their usual whist drive and dance in the hall Saturday evening, February 9, commencing at eight o'clock. Many excellent whist prizes are offered

The Manitoba Ladies' Basketball team arrived in Edmonton on Saturday morning for a series of games in this city. They travelled in a special coach over the Canadian Pacific railway.

Sound Auction Bridge

WRONG BIDDING OF A TWO-SUITER.

It may surprise many players to learn that the greatly increased trick-taking value of a two-suited hand, when played with one of its two suits as trump, over its value when played at No Trump, was not clearly recognized until completely set forth in my Auction Bridge Standards in 1921.

Prior to that time players had no real conception of the fact that if a two-suited hand can go game at No Trump, it should more easily go game with one of the suits as trump, even though a Minor suit; and also that if more than game is probable at No Trump, a Slam can usually be made with one of the two suits as trump.

To such an extent was the value of a No Trump bid as the primary game-going declaration ingrained in the minds of old-time Bridge players, that they are guilty, even at the present time, of lapses into old methods of bidding.

The bidding of the following hand is a case in point:

North:
♠ A 9 6 7 4
♥ A Q 7 6 4
♦ 8
♣ Q 7

West:
♠ J 10 8 5 3
♥ 3 2
♦ A 9 3
♣ 10 8 6

East:
♠ Q 2
♥ K 8 5
♦ K J 5 2
♣ 5 4 3 2

South:
♠ K
♥ J 10 9
♣ A K J 9

South, the Dealer, correctly opened the bidding with one Club. Second Hand passing, North bid one Spade. East passing, South bid No Trump. West passing North bid two Hearts. South then incorrectly bid two No Trumps, figuring that if North hold both Spades and Hearts, and he (South) both Diamonds and Clubs, then No Trump should be the preferred bid.

North having shown both of his suits and neither being of such excess strength or length as to warrant its rebid, passed.

The result, under this old style of bidding, was that South played the hand at No Trump, and although he did make game in this instance, five-odd and a possible Slam could have been made at Hearts.

The correct Contract and Auction bidding of this hand will be explained in Monday's article.

Canadian Policy Upheld In Chicago

Associated Press

MONTREAL, Feb. 9—An Ottawa despatch to the Gazette today says in part:

"An important vindication of the policy of the Canadian custodian in retaining German investment in Canadian securities is found in the news received today by the department of state that the United States district court in Chicago has given a judgment upholding the contention of the Dominion government before that court." The despatch goes on to say that the judgment was against "the action of Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, on behalf of the family of the late Jacob Braun to compel the Canadian Pacific Railway to transfer to the name of the family 470 shares of that railway's stock purchased by Mr. Braun in Cologne, Germany, in 1920. The present market value of the stock and the accrued interest would exceed $200,000."

THIS HAS HAPPENED

RUTH LESTER, beautiful secretary to "HANDSOME HARRY BORDEN," suspects her employer of shady stock dealings and would resign but for a romance that springs up between her and JACK HAYWARD, whose office is just across the narow airshaft from Borden's. On a Saturday morning in January she informs BENNY SMITH, office boy, of her engagement to Jack.

When Borden comes in, Ruth hands him an orchid-tinted envelope which he impatiently thrusts into his pocket and greets with an oath her information that the "woman with the beautiful contralto voice" called him. Ruth gets $500 from the bank with two tickets with drawing room for Winter Haven for Borden.

RITA DUBOIS, night club dancer, who is to accompany Borden to the resort, calls during the morning. Another caller is MRS. BORDEN, the promoter's wife and mother of his two children. Borden forces her to ask him for her monthly alimony on a certain date. Learning Borden is busy, the wife agrees to return about 1:30, but before she leaves she glimpses a pistol in Ruth's desk.

When Rita leaves Borden waves goodby with the torn half of a bank note, reminding her of a certain bargain. While Ruth is taking Borden's dictation he makes a playful pass at her and she screams. Jack in the opposite office hears her and becomes violently angry at Borden. She meets Jack for luncheon but forgets her bank book and rushes back to the office where she bruises her lip. She has a difficult time convincing Jack that Borden did not hurt her. While they are lunching, Jack discovers he has left the theatre tickets on his desk and he returns to get them.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VI

Jack made an impatient gesture toward the waiter who had hurried to the table, order pad in hand. "No dessert. But you can bring the check."

"What do you mean—Borden?" he demanded of Ruth, in an odd, constrained voice, as the waiter was removing Ruth's dish of melted ice cream.

"You—you look so queer that I thought you might have had a quarrel with Borden," Ruth quivered, oblivious of the waiter's presence. "Oh, Jack, what is the matter? Did you see him?"

Jack frowned, then poured himself a cup of coffee with a hand that trembled slightly. "Why should I see him? Watching Borden isn't my favorite indoor sport!"

He must have realized then how violent his voice was, for he softened it suddenly. "There's nothing the matter, honey. I—just thought I'd gather up some work to do over the week-end," and he pointed to the well-filled brief case he had propped up against the wall.

"You're—going to work tomorrow?" Ruth asked slowly.

Jack smiled at her, with oddly pale taut lips. "Just during the day. We'll have our evening together. Sorry to have kept you waiting, sweetheart."

She tried gallantly to play up, though her heart felt like a stone in her breast. "Poor Letty! She's like a ghost, isn't she, dear? A drab, gray, old ghost, haunting a scrub pail and a mop. But I'll never forget Letty. You know, darling, it was your sweetness to old Letty that made me first realize that I loved you."

His smile became more natural, eager. "Yes? I thought you said last night you'd loved me since the first time you saw me, when you were feeding the pigeons."

"Of course!" she nodded, almost happy again. "But I didn't realize until the other day—Tuesday, wasn't it? How long ago it seems now!—when you were showing me your offices so proudly. Remember? You'd sent Miss Hester out for a quart of hot chocolate, and you made poor old Letty have some, too."

• • •

"Oh, Letty and I are pals," Jack laughed. "Ever since her first day in the building, when I noticed that she was new, and told her I was glad to meet her, she's thought your precious Jack a 'really remarkable fellow.'"

"And he is!" Ruth cried, completely happy again. "Oh, Jack!" She caught her breath sharply on that beloved name. Then she laughed softly, her blue eyes limpid with love. "Darling, I'll never forget how comical you looked last night when I came back into the room without my spectacles, with my curls turned loose and that awful yellowish powder scrubbed off my face—"

"That was a mean trick to play on a man!" Jack chided her tenderly. "Let him get himself engaged to one girl and then find himself saddled with an entirely different one!"

"Are you sorry, darling?" she teased the dimple tugging at the corner of her beautiful little mouth.

"I suppose I'll have to make the best of you," Jack retorted. Then, to the waiter. "The check? Oh, yes."

Ruth, watching his face because she loved it so, saw a frown pass quickly over it as his eyes scanned the check. And again joy fled from her heart. . . She tried to grasp its flying wings. . . "Oh, no! Jack isn't stingy! Why, he's the soul of generosity. I've seen him tip Letty and the elevator boys—"

She turned away her eyes, lest she see that the tip was small . . . She could not have borne that—not today.

"Your brief case, sir!" the waiter called to Jack as he and Ruth were leaving.

Jack accepted the heavy bag with muttered thanks and Ruth thought he looked at it with distaste—disgust even. "The poor dear doesn't want to work but feels that he has to, now that he's an engaged man, planning to get married!' she deduced, trying to recapture joy. "Of course! That's why the bill dismayed him. He wants to save for our home—now."

At the theatre Jack refused the singsong offer, "Check your hat and coat and bag, sir. Check your hat and—" with a curt "No!" And he nursed the heavy bag on his knees during the entire performance of the play.

The show they had chosen so happily the night before, when making their plans, proved a disappointment. It was a murder mystery, with the action taking place in a court room. Ruth had wanted to see it because of her familiarity with the law and with trial procedure, but unfortunately the district attorney looked something like her father, who had lost his life in a court room, and during the second act she burst into tears and cried so hard that people around them looked at her with impatient disapproval.

"I think we'd better duck the rest of this," Jack urged, his mouth tight and grim. "I never realized—I'm not enjoying it any better than you are, darling. I've already guessed who the murderer is anyway—pretty obvious, and it's rather a sordid way to spend our big afternoon."

"No, let's stay," Ruth choked. "I—I want you to get your money's worth."

When she had said it she could have bitten out her tongue. Her only excuse was that by this time she was so nervous and ill—She must be taking a dreadful cold!—that she hardly knew what she was saying.

• • •

They sat through the third act, their hands touching only once. And she had dreamed all morning of that glorious opportunity for holding hands!

"Let's go to the savings bank first, then on to my apartment for dinner," Ruth suggested, almost timidly, when they left the theatre. "I want to cook for you—to get into practice."

"That's the spirit!" Jack applauded, but the smile on his lips scarcely touched his eyes. What—oh, what had happened? Ruth wondered desperately.

But in the bank, open Saturday afternoons for savings bank depositors, he seemed more himself again, teasing her about her thriftiness, and gallantly relieving her of her handbag while she made out her deposit slip and endorsed her salary check.

"Peeking to see what kind of lipstick I use?" she laughed at him, when she left the teller's window.

Jack closed her little brown leather handbag and flushed as if he had been caught in the act of stealing. "Just curious to see what a girl stuffs into a handbag," he grinned at her. "I never saw one that didn't look ready to burst. I noticed that the little inside mirror broke when you dropped your bag in the hotel dining room. Are you superstitious?"

Ruth shivered. "Seven years bad luck, you mean? Pooh! You can't scare me! I've just entered on seven years divine luck—and seven more and seven more—and seven more—" she chanted.

Jack's mobile, sensitive face went grave again, almost shadowed. "Please God you're right, dear."

And do what she would that evening and the next, Ruth Lester could not long keep the shadow of trouble, even fear, out of her lover's eyes. True, he at the dinner that she cooked for him, and praised her culinary art extravagantly. But after the dishes were washed and restored to the tiny cupboard in the miniature kitchenet, he slumped into gloom again, forgetting to kiss her for as long as half an hour at a time. She spent most of Sunday in bed, but contrary to her fears, an actual cold did not develop. There was just that odd shiver that ran along her nerves at the most unexpected moment.

• • •

Sunday evening they ate dinner in the little restaurant to which Ruth had taken Jack for the first time they had ever eaten together, in obedience to his whimsical request that she show him where she got such potent crumbs that the black pigeon would eat out of her hand.

"Oh, Jack, the poor pigeons!" Ruth remembered the birds contritely. "I was so happy yesterday that I forgot to buy peanuts to feed them before I left for the week-end. I meant to do it when I was out getting Mr. Borden's money and tickets. Poor Satan! Do you think he'll starve to death before Monday? I'll take a lot of crumbs with me in the morning—"

"I don't like that black pigeon!" Jack surprised Ruth by saying the absurd words grimly. "He looks too much like his namesake, 'Handsome Harry.'"

"Darling!" Ruth laughed. "I do believe you're jealous of the black pigeon! He's a greedy scamp. But have you noticed how the little white pigeon adores him? She's never far from his side, although she's too timid to eat out of my hand yet. I wonder if most of the pigeon's aren't ladies who are in love with Black Satan. He struts about as if he were the lord of creation. . . . I wonder, too," she mused, "how Rita Dubois is enjoying the week-end. I know she doesn't really care for Harry Borden—"

"Let's not talk about that man again!" Jack interrupted vehemently. Then, as Ruth's delicate little face flushed and quivered: "Sorry, darling! I'm all on edge. . . . Keyed up, I suppose, to my new responsibilities. Shall we go out to Grandbury with Cowan next Sunday and look at the lots? Oh, Ruth! I do love you so! Forgive me for being so difficult last night and tonight. I—lots on my mind. Got to plan a future for Mr. and Mrs. John Carrington Hayward. Love me? Say it, Ruth!"

It was not until she was dressing to go to the office Monday morning that Ruth realized Jack had not reminded her of her promise to resign her position as Harry Borden's secretary. "But—why should he remind me?" she reasoned. "He knows I'll keep my promise, and I can understand his not wanting to talk about it."

She arrived at the office at 9.15, though Borden never required her presence until half past. And his train was not due from Winter Haven until 12.10. There was a great pile of letters on the floor, beneath the slot in the door, but there was something Ruth had to do before she opened, read and sorted the mail. She had not forgotten the pigeons this time. Benny Smith had not arrived, although he was suposed to open the offices at nine o'clock sharp. Of course he was taking advantage of Borden's absence.

Ruth took the dried sponge out of the little glass dish on her desk, then emptied into it an envelope of peanuts and a larger package of crumbs. Satan and his harem should have a feast and not have to wait until noon for it, either!

Smiling, she opened the door between her office and Borden's private office and, with the glass dish in her hand, stepped across the threshold.

The ghastly spectacle that met her eyes robbed her of all power of motion for the moment, and the pigeons of their meal. The glass dish fell to the floor, the peanuts and crumbs scattering upon the thick velvet rug. . . . But Ruth did not see them, for her eyes were fixed in a trance of horror upon the thing that lay near the window on the floor.

How's She Hittin'?
Hints On Car Care

BY ISRAEL KLEIN

Many sections of the United States and Canada are subject to a treacherous change in weather about this time, that causes considerable worry and trouble to motorists. It is when snow has fallen, a cold spell has forced drivers to put an extra quantity of alcohol in their radiators and the temperature rises suddenly that trouble begins.

Trouble may be avoided offhand at least to some extent, by having a glycerine mixture in the cooling system. The advantage of this solution is that will not boil out when a warm spell comes along, and it won't freeze at a sudden drop in temperature if enough glycerine has been provided at the beginning of the winter season.

It is essential, however, that the precautions necessary to the use of glycerine are taken and checked up—or the unwary motorist might drive into a peck of difficulties with the loss of the necessary anti-freeze.

The alcohol user should always be alert to the fact that it evaporates with use and must therefore be watched and checked up constantly. His difficulty arises when, after putting in the necessary large proportion needed for a real cold spell, he finds himself in the midst of a quick rise in temperature.

Alcohol boils at a lower temperature than does water. The result is steam emanates from the radiator overflow pipe and thn from the cap even before the motor reaches its point of efficiency. If this isn't stopped immediately, the alcoholic steam will eat off the pyroxlin lacquer with which our modern autos are finished.

Sign of this trouble may be noticed by the sudden upward rise of the radiator thermometer. It acts just as though the cooling system was frozen and if the weather is just at the point of freezing temperature, the motorist sometimes can't tell whether the solution is really frozen or whether it is an oversupply of alcohol that has caused the steam.

The way to be convinced that it is one or the other is to put up the hood and feel the lower hose coupling between radiator and engine. I fit is cold and hard, the cooling system is frozen. If it is soft and warm, the steam is coming from too much alcohol.

Oversupply of alcohol can also be detected by the pungent odor of the denatured alcohol.

The remedy for a frozen cooling system is to run into a warm garage and let the system thaw out. Running the motor slowly will help somewhat, but it should not be raced, nor should this be attempted with the car out in the cold.

When the alcohol trouble arises, the remedy is simple. Add water and drive on. After a drive of a few minutes run into a service station and have the solution tested with the special hydrometer designed for this purpose. If it shows too much alcohol, some of the solution should be drained and more water put in.

But i fthe warm spell isn't expected to last very long, it might be best to keep the alcohol in the car and drive with the radiator shutter wide open. If however, the thermometer rises above the safety line again, the solution would have to be drained down a little and more water added.

• • •

Th cooling system is only one of the sources of difficulty when the weather changes suddenly. Others will be considered next week.

AUTO DEATHS DECREASE IN LICENSE STATE

CHICAGO, Jan. 26—Deaths from motor vehicle accidents have gone down by about 20 per cent. in those states having drivers' license laws that provide for the examination of new drivers and that administer these provisions properly.

That this reduction in automotive fatalities is due entirely to these laws and their proper administration is the conviction of Sidney J. Williams, director of the public safety division of the National Safety Council. Williams' department has just completed an elaborate study of the fatalities in the states having such laws.

These states include Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, California, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. A few additional states have drivers' license laws, but do not require examination of new drivers and in most cases aren't administered by a strong centralized state bureau. These states, Williams finds, have not enjoyed a reduction of accidents that could be ascribed to such laws.

Laws Start Down Trend

In those states with properly administered license laws calling for drivers' examinations, Williams found a definite downward trend in the rate of automotive fatalities since the adoption of these laws. In only two of these, Maine and Vermont, has the rate been slightly upward, and in one, New Hampshire, has it been practically at a standstill.

This Williams explains by the fact that these are vacation states and that the heavy summer tourist travel there brought about the increase in auto fatalities. The same reason may be advanced for the failure of the rate to go down in New Hampshire.

According to Williams, the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads found that 21 per cent. of the vehicles on Maine highways in 1924 were of "foreign" or out of state registration, and 35 per cent. in Vermont in 1926. The ratio of summer accident frequency is four and a half times as great as in other states, and in Vermont it is nearly eight times as great.

Atlantic Coast Safest

Since all but one of the states included in this survey are found along the North Atlantic coast, an interesting comparison has been made between the automotive fatalities here and those in the remainder of the country, the middle western and the southern states especially.

The figures are from 1920 to 1926 and show that while fatalities in these years increased 64 per cent. in the North Atlantic states against an increased registration of 158 per cent., deaths in the middle west increased 100 per cent. against a registration of only 126 per cent., and deaths in the south went up 230 per cent. with an increase of 194 per cent. in registrations.

"The results of this study," concludes Williams, "may be accepted as conclusive evidence of the value of a license law with examination, properly administered, and of the need for enacting and administering such a law in every state of the union.

"The states not now having license laws suffered a total of 17,000 motor vehicle fatalities in 1927. It may be confidently expected that if each of these states would enact a license law including examination of new drivers, with the proper machinery for enforcing it, there would be within a few years a saving of over 3,000 lives per year."

Like Driving An Auto

There's as much, if not less, to piloting an airplane nowadays as to driving a motor car. Here, for example, is how the driver's compartment of a flying boat off the shores of Miami, Fla., looks. Miss Renee Bonnie, a student flier, is sitting alongside her instructor while manipulating the hand controls by means of a conventional steering wheel.

Beautiful Roads

The campaign against advertising signs that blot the landscape and incur dangers along state highways has advanced to such an extent that already some parts of the country are planning further means to keep the highways beautiful.

In California, for example, there's a state-wide movement to interest land owners and motorists in the removal of unsightly and unhealthy material along roadsides. Untenanted and dilapidated shacks, old signs, dead trees and other disfigurements are being removed by the various civic organizations of the state.

The state has gone further in the effort to provide not only good highways but beautiful scenery along the way. B. B. Meek, director of public works, has ordered that no trees or shrubs be cut unnecessarily from roadsides. Only when pruning is insufficient to give the visibility desired for safe motoring is a tree to be removed.

We may expect therefore, at least in California, the development of a road system that will be not only safe but pleasant to travel over.

Other states are doing similar work, so that the next generation may enjoy a much more beautiful road system than we have today.

RUBBER USED EXTENSIVELY IN NEW FORD

There are a hundred and ten rubber parts in the model "A" Ford and a great many of these functions solely to protect the car and its occupants against the action and the noise of road shocks and power vibrations.

This system of rubber shock and noise insulation begins of course with the new and larger balloon tires, but these are not counted among the hundred and ten rubber parts alluded to above. Engine mountings of the car are cushioned in rubber. The spare wheel carrier support has a rubber anti-rattler device. The steering column support has another. The steering gear control rod has a third anti-rattler device made of rubber.

Then there is a rubber anti-rattler on the gas tank cable support and another on the carburetor adjusting rod on the dash board that keeps the rod from developing that buzzing song. The front belt rail has another anti-rattler device of rubber.

Wherever, through years of testing and experimenting, Ford engineers have found there is possibility of a squeak developing where frame members are joined, or where the body is attached to the frame, rubber anti-squeak parts have been designed and installed in the new Ford. Doors and windows are also insulated with rubber.

But rubber plays a number of other important roles in the performance of the new Ford. The windshield, windows and doors are fitted with rubber weatherstrips to keep out driving rain and wind. The entire ignition system is insulated with rubber and hard rubber is utilized in the manufacture of a number of model "A" Ford parts. The steering wheel is finished in hard rubber. "Fordite," which is used in door bumpers and a number of other parts, is a high grade rubber composition material.

Giant Mergers Forced Keen Auto Competition During The Last Year

By Science Editor, NEA Service

The year 1928 will be known in future history as the merger year in the automobile industry.

Yet, outstanding as this development is, it isn't alone in importance among the achievements of this great field. For close behind come such significant factors of 1928 as:

1—A new high record in automotive production.

2—The new Chevrolet six, marking the departure of General Motors from the four-cylinder field.

3—The return of Ford to mass production.

4—Introduction of at least three new cars and promise of more in the first of the year.

Decline of the Smaller Car

5—Tendency of small cars to become larger.

6—Great expansion of the export trade.

7—Introduction of an eight-cylinder automobile in the price field below $1,000.

8—Use of high-grade features in low-price cars.

9—Innovation of a radically new type of body by Buick.

10—Appointment of a "czar" for the rubber industry.

Besides these developments that mark 1928 as an important year in automotive industry, there are other factors only second in importance to them. For example, we might remember that Nash introduced its "400" series and dual ignition, that Dodge dropped the four for the six, that Duesenberg came out with a brand-new straight eight of 265 horsepower, that Velie definitely went over to aviation, that Auburn brought out a six below the $1,000 mark and that another European automobile, the Lancia, came over for American production to keep the Rolls-Royce company.

1926 No More Record Year

As a result of all this 1928 will be remembered as the record year of all, even surpassing 1926 in all its glory.

In 1926, production took the high peak of more than 4,500,000 passenger cars and trucks. But this year's production up to Dec. 1 passes the mark set in the first 11 months of 1926 and needs a production of less than 140,000 cars to pass the previous record. This is certain, for Chevrolet alone is going full blast at a rate of production exceeding 5,000 a day.

That new Chevrolet marks a turning point in automotive history. It puts General Motors, greatest producer of automobiles in the world, altogether out of this field and leaves it open only to Ford, Whippet, Plymouth and Durant.

The narrowing of the four-cylinder field by so great a margin as Chevrolet has left is even further threatened by the encroachment of the six into the price class of the four.

Despite this threat, however, Ford is steadily increasing his production. To an average demand of 7,000 of his cars a day, he has worked up his production until now he is putting out 6,500 a day and soon will pass the daily demand for his product. In order to break even, it is said, he has to produce and sell 5,000 Model A's a day.

Mergers Still Mystify

Some authorities believe that it was Ford's and Chevrolet's mass production that forced the mergers we have witnessed in the past year. These may be traced partly to this, but many other perhaps more important factors led to merging of the large automotive firms.

The first great step in this direction was the merger of Chrysler and Dodge, involving perhaps half a million dollars. Later on in the year came the wedding of Pierce-Arrow and Studebaker, and only lately we have heard of the merger of Hupmobile and Chandler.

Several parts manufacturers also have joined forces, while the two great organizations—Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' association and the Automotive Equipment association—now are one.

What all this means and what the mergers are leading to are questions that still puzzle independents in the automotive field. And it is yet too close to their consummation to make any sort of guess or prediction.

Despite these mergers, however, those still left out continue to show their independence by the introduction of new models of far more ambitious scope than has ever been shown before. Perhaps the most striking example is that of Marmon, which has just announced its intention to introduce early next spring a new eight-cylinder automobile, with all "modern improvements," for less than $1,000. The car is to be named the Roosevelt.

In addition, Reo has come out with the "Mate" to the "Flying Cloud," Auburn with a new six for $995, while we shall be introduced to at least two more entirely new automobiles at the New York show.

In the face of this two cars have dropped by the wayside in 1928. Velie discontinued automotive production for aviation, for which he has developed a motor that gives him greater promise than he had from his car. Falcon-Knight is the short-lived product of Willys-Knight that has gone into the limbo of the past.

Of even greater significance is the apparent failure of the small European car. Introduced with Whippet only two years ago, the trend seems to be away from tiny proportions into a field to compare with the moderate-sized automobile. Chevrolet has increased its wheelbase seven inches and put a larger body on the frame. Whippet has had to enlarge its dimensions somewhat, and even the new Ford is slightly larger than the old model T.

Make Room for Third Car

Competition has grown particularly keen, yet the field has expanded considerably. Passenger car registration in the United States is expected to pass the 25,000,000 mark by January 1, while motorists are making room for a third car in their garages. Of the 60 per cent. of American families that own automobiles, nearly 15 per cent. own two cars, while half of these make room for three.

The export field has opened up for the American manufacturer much more widely than ever. In 1927, shipments of automobiles and related parts abroad were valued at a total of $406,000,000. The first 10 months of 1928, however, surpass this full-year amount by more than $34,000,000.

With a monthly average of more than $44,000,000 in automotive exports for 1928, therefore, we may expect the year's total to approach a value of $530,000,000, which would be about 20 per cent. above the 1927 export trade.

One of the noticeable tendencies in automotive design was the radical departure Buick made from the conventional style of body, last summer. The rounded, wider type of body is still experimental. It is, however, established that automobile passengers need more room for their comfort and that the only way to afford this is to widen the body.

Pioneer in Safety and Comfort

Buick's innovation of the wider, rounded body is second to its more famous mechanical departure, when it introduced the four-wheel brakes. Perhaps others will follow the new trend as they did the earlier one.

And perhaps those who will make the first step toward this change will be the manufacturers of low-priced cars. For it is they who have succeeded in introducing nearly all the major improvements we saw heretofore only on the more costly products. Low price no longer bars one from the advantages of the air cleaner, fuel filter and oil strainer, the thermostatic control and many other refinements for easier and more comfortable driving. In fact, it includes such better factors as the moveable front seat, the fuel pump, the one-button control, chromium plating, shatterproof glass and so on.

In the tire industry, business has been just as remarkable as in the automotive field. But perhaps the most significant development for 1928 was the appointment of Lincoln C. Andrews, former federal prohibition commissioner, as "czar" of the rubber industry, and the formation under him of the American Rubber Institute.

This development rounds up a year of achievement that puts the automotive industry and its allied field of rubber far in the van of American manufacture.

MOTOR BUYERS PROVE BETTER CREDIT RISKS

More Confidence Shown by Finance Companies Than in Former Years

By ISRAEL KLEIN

The American motorist, on the average, is financially more dependable than he has been in previous years.

This conclusion is made after a close study of the annual report for the year ending November 1, given out by the National Association of Finance Companies. The report on the whole shows a brighter outlook in the sale of automobiles despite one or two foreboding factors.

Perhaps most important of these is the trend toward more frequent repossession both of new and of used automobiles and the consequent increase in losses to the automobile finance companies. Almost three per cent of the new automobiles for which a third of their cost was paid down had to be taken back, while more than four per cent were repossessed among those for which a fourth down payment was made.

In the case of used cars, the percentage of repossessions was 5.3 when 40 per cent of the purchase price was paid down, and almost 11 when 35 per cent was paid down. The latter was an increase of 5 per cent over last year's figure.

More Cash Purchases

In the face of these increased repossessions, however, the association figures show a more promising trend in the purchase of automobiles. Foremost is the fact that more cars were bought for cash in the last fiscal year of the association than in any preceding period.

This tendency is attributed first to the general feeling of prosperity throughout the country and second to the fact that the finance companies have tightened up on credits among those buyers who made low down payments and required extended time for the payment of their cars.

Although such credit was harder to get, those buyers who did succeed in gaining the approval of the finance companies were able to pay less as their original payments for their cars and to get even more time to pay off the balance than has heretofore been allowed.

More Confidence In Buyers

For example, the figures show that in 1927 only 5.2 per cent of the paper accepted was for less than one-third down payment, while in 1928 this number had gone up to 6.1 per cent. And the proportion of notes for the remainder calling for more than 12 monthly payments has gone up from 12.4 per cent in 1927 to 14.5 per cent in 1928.

Yet the confidence of the finance companies toward the American motorist is increased. This is due to the fact that more prospects have paid all cash for their cars and especially that the used car buyers have increased their cash purchases. It is proven by the increase of long-time notes after small first payments, despite the tightening of credit in this class.

Another promising factor has been the decrease in the percentage of trade-ins on new cars. This, although slight, is due to the greater number of motorists who are moving into the two-car class. In the used car field, however, the percentage of trade-ins increased slightly.

"Balloon Notes" Gone

Most encouraging is the elimination of the "balloon note" evil. Used extensively in 1925 and 1926, the practice has declined rapidly until now it is almost wholly abolished.

In skyrocketing a note, a dealer would take any little sum as a down payment but would adjust the note to the finance companies to read "regular down payment of one-third." In order to compensate for the difference, the dealer would raise the purchase price to a fictitious sum.

As a result of this loose credit, repossession of cars sold on these "balloon notes" were very high. In 1925 the average loss per car was $220, and repossession was made in 11 cases out of every hundred. Today repossessions are not more than 4.1 per cent in the most risky class of new car purchasers, and the average loss through repossession is $56.

"Coal exposed to the elements loses 10 per cent. of its weight and power," said the lecturer. "This is due to the action of the alkali constituents of ——"

"But what if there's a dog sleeping near the coal?" interrupted a student.

"Now, then, none of your levity, young man," snapped the lecturer. "This is a very serious matter."

"That's just what dad thought when 72 per cent. of the coal he had bought disappeared during three nights of exposure," piped the student. "Then he asked my advice, as a student in chemistry, and I told him to buy a good dog. He bought a bulldog with bay-window teeth, and now we don't lose one per cent. of our coal a month. That's practical chemistry."

The Problem Of The Trade-ins

Up to a few years ago, the great fear of the automobile manufacturer was that of saturation. There was a belief that some day will come when everyone will have his automobile and there will be no more to sell. Only the up-and-coming leaders of the industry would therefore survive to take care of the motorists wishing to replace their old cars with new.

But soon the country realized that this idea of saturation was only a myth. Soon we saw that two cars, and now three cars, came into use in single families and that there seemed to be no end to the demand for more automobiles. So the fear of saturation was dispelled.

Later, in its place, came the dread of the used automobile. What to do with the millions of second-hand cars not yet ready for the junk heap that were being traded in annually for new cars. Would there be enough buyers of these to take them all up, and if so how many of these buyers would leave other "trade-ins" for the dealer to worry about?

The problem seemed to be insoluble and inescapable. But at last the same thing is happening to this as happened to the saturation myth. We are finding this too to be a baseless fear. We find the trade-in problem solving itself.

No greater authority than Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, assures us that henceforth only obsolete automobiles—those immediately ready for the junk heap—will be traded in for new cars. In fact, the motoring public is so great that every manufacturer now in the business will have his hands full satisfying the demand for new cars to replace the automobiles that are becoming obsolete. Even those motorists who have been in the habit of buying only used cars have become so great a portion of the motoring public that the problem soon will be how to satisfy their demand for used cars, rather than how to take care of any oversupply of such automobiles.

DUNLOP TIRE DESIGNED FOR WINTER ROADS

New Style Now Being Placed on the Market

Announcement has been made by the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Co., Limited, of a tire especially designed and constructed for winter driving. Perhaps the most important feature of this innovation, according to the Dunlop Company, is that the tire can be used safely without chains. Automotive engineers who have been consulted have called it the greatest advancement for the safety of motorists and pedestrians since the inauguration of four-wheel brakes.

This tire, which is now being placed on the national market, is the first of its kind ever made. It is known by the appropriate name, "Winterized." For a number of years all tires carried some form of toughened tread, but this is the only tire which has been built especially for winter driving. It is constructed on the principle of a cleated shoe. Sharp rectangular knobs are raised up on the standard tread like the cleats on the sole of a football shoe.

After the trying conditions of winter have worn down the cleats, the standard long mileage Dunlop non-skid balloon tread comes into play—ready when spring comes to take over the changed road demands brought about by the difference between winter and spring road conditions.

The winter mileage provided by the cleats themselves is entirely additional to the standard tread mileage.

STUDEBAKER NEW MODELS WELL RECEIVED

The most enthusiastic reception ever accorded new Studebaker models greeted the introduction of the new President Eight and the new Commander at the National Automobile Show in Toronto last week, according to word received from Toronto by J. S. McCallum, Studebaker Erskine dealer here.

Two of the smartest cars in the show were The Commander Convertible Cabriolet and the new five passenger brougham on both The President Eight and The Commander Chassis. The Commander Cabriolet was finished in a smart new shade of Canary yellow with black running gear, wire wheels, and many bright touches of gleaming chromium plate. Many critics judged it the smartest car in this year's motor exhibition.

"The new features contributing to comfort, easy handling and safety of the new cars received much favorable comment. Many motorists commented particularly on the increased width and roominess of both front and rear seats, on the adjustable front seats of The President and Commander models, and on the comfortable driving position assured by the steering wheel, clutch, brake pedal and adjustable driver's seat.

"Studebaker's adoption of non-shatterable safety glass for the windshields of all new Commander and President models also met with much favor, as did the practice of equipping all the new cars with double automatic windshield wipers which give both driver and passenger a clear view of the road in storms," he said.

"As an immediate reflection of the popularity of the new models it was announced during the show that Studebaker had embarked on the greatest January production [illegible] in Studebaker h[illegible]

MOTOR CAR SUPPLY CO. GIVES BANQUET

Eastern Guests Give Very Interesting Addresses To Dealers

Several hundred automobile dealers and equipment men of Northern Alberta were guests at a banquet tendered by the Motor Car Supply Co of Canada in the Macdonald Hotel on Friday at 7:30 p.m. The banquet was held in conjunction with the equipment show which opened in the Memorial Hall Friday and the guests of honor were E. W. BeSaw, Hamilton, Ont., vice-president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, J. A. Livingstone, Firestone sales manager, Russell T. Kelly, advertising counsel and head of the Hamilton Advertising Agency, L. A. Cavanaugh, head of the Motor Car Supply Company, E. J. Flavin, Edmonton manager, and S. J. Davidson, sales manager for the local branch.

Mr. Cavanaugh introduced the staff of the Motor Car Supply Company and referred to the remarkable success of his company which resulted through faith in the country. He declared that the development of the north country, the last great new land, had finally started and painted a rosy picture of the future. The Motor Show at the Memorial Hall resulted from the co-operation of 27 automobile equipment managers and presented the very latest in motor car accessories, he said.

E. W. BeSaw referred to the history of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., founded by Harvey S. Firestone, and claimed for his firm the manufacture of the first full baloon tire and the first full molded tube. Foresight was the keynote of the Firestone organization, he declared, and outlined the steps of progress that were adopted to live up to the Firestone slogan of "more miles per dollar."

In 1929 more than 50,000,000 Firestone advertisements will appear in Canada, including insertions in daily and weekly papers, billboards and magazines, according to Russell T. Kelly, advertising counsel. "Where there is no vision the people perish," is a Biblical quotation and it certainly applies to business," declared Mr. Kelly in referring to the economic and financial progress of the city. "We do not spend money in advertising, we merely invest it," Mr. Kelly stated.

J. A. Livingstone, sales manager, gave an informative address on the servicing and care of tires, illustrating his remarks by an interesting motion picture in which was explained the modern construction of Firestone tires and tubes.

At the show, held in Memorial Hall, all the latest equipment for modern garage work is on display.

There are 26 companies represented at the show, these being the Federal Cartride Company; Wahl Company Limited; Albertson Company; Berger Manufacturing Company; Black & Decker; Bonney Tool & Forge Company; Curtis Manufacturing Company; Walker Manufacturing Company; Packard Electric Company; Champion Spark Plug Company; Canadian National Carbon Company; A. H. Fraser Company; Hutto Engineering Company; Weaver Manufacturing Company; Canadian Johns-Mannville Company; McKinnon-Columbus Chain Company; Storm Manufacturing Company; Whittaker Battery Supply Company; Atwater-Kent Manufacturing Company; U. S. L. Battery Company; Tidewater Oil Corporation; Motor X. Ray Company; Firestone Tire and Rubber Company; Lift-a-Kar Company; Canadian Liquid Air Company, and the Acme White Lead and Color Company.

Dealers and garage men from all over northern Alberta are in attendance and several thousands will have visited the display before it closes Saturday night.

FIVE MILLION AUTO SALE THIS YEAR

Export Business, Replacement Demand, New Buyers, Cause of Increase

CLEVELAND, Feb. 2—Increase in the number of automobiles that have ended their period of usefulness, widening of the field of new buyers and a greater export demand will combine to cause the sale of perhaps 5,000,000 automobiles in 1929.

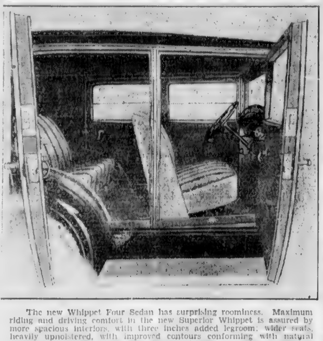
This rise of almost half a million cars over the record year of 1928 is predicted by Allard Smith, vice-president of the Union Trust Co. of Cleveland. It is the result of a close study, first, of the possibilities of production with in the industry, and then of the likelihood of sales outside.

"There are three sources of consumption for automobile production," says Smith. "The first of these is replacement demand. The second is the demand of new buyers and the third is the export trade.

"During 1929 the replacement demand for cars will probably be the largest registered in the history of the industry. This estimate is based upon the fact that there are now approximately 25,0000,000 cars and that the average life of a motor car is estimated at around six years. During the current year the vintage of 1923 will be ready for replacement.

"It will be remembered that 1923, with an output of more than 4,000,000 units, was the first year of gigantic production. A reasonable estimate of replacement demand for 1929 is something more than 3,000,000 cars and trucks.

Bigger Bodies—More Comfort



The new Whippet Four Sedan has surprising roominess. Maximum riding and driving comfort in the new Superior Whippet is assured by more spacious interiors, with three inches added legroom; wider seats, heavily upholstered, with improved contours conforming with natural body curves, longer springs both front and rear; full balloon tires and snubbers.

By means of an electric current passed through a cable laid in the water, fish are electrocuted and thus caught in some parts of Germany. Sporting anglers consider this a revolting practice.

HOW DOUGLAS FIR GOT ITS NAME

Douglas fir, the largest timber tree grown in Canada, receives its name from David Douglas, the first person to describe the tree to the scientific world. Douglas was a Scottish botanist who, just one hundred years ago (he first came to America in 1823 and left this continent in 1833), spent several years in British Columbia and the northwestern United States. During this time he discovered a hundred and fifty species of plants previously unknown to science, and he introduced into cultivation in the British Isles two hundred and seventeen species, including the Douglas fir, the sugar pine and the redwood. The Douglas fir was first discovered by A. Menzies, the surgeon of Vancouver, in his voyage of discovery, but was introduced to Europe by Douglas.

Willys-Knight Wins Five Out of Six Firsts In Contests

With the Willys-Knight standard six setting an outstanding performance record in this country, which is reflected in the wide public demand for this lowest priced Knight engined six, comes word from Australia of the signal success of the same car in the annual automobile contests staged under the supervision of the Royal Automobile Association of Australia.

The Willys-Knight Standard Six in the Australian contests made an outstanding record by winning five of the events in which it was entered and finishing second in the sixth—a veritable clean sweep for the Standard six.

The contests, which were open to all stock cars of the world, included hill climbing, acceleration, speed, slow running, economy and reliability. In the three various classes there were 49 competitors representing automobile manufacturers of Great Britain, Continental Europe and the United States.

Compared with the records established in contests held in previous years, the performance of the Willys-Knight in 1928 Australian events has never before been equalled by a car of any other make.

In a recent campaign in Brazil under the auspices of the Good Roads Association, eight cars were entered over the difficult 200 kilometer route from Sao Poula to Campos de Jordao and return as a manifestation of that country's demand for better highways.

In this gruelling drive over an almost impassable road, a Willys-Knight great six was one of the only two cars that reached Campos do Jordao and the only car of the eight that made the return trip to Sao Paulo.

NEW HUDSON POWER PLANT IS SPEEDY

In outward aspect, the new rubber-mounted power plant of The Greater Hudson—as the new car is called—remains the 3½ x 5 F-head motor developed by the company. In its different performance, however, the engine betokens the adoption of a number of refinements. These become evident, first of all, in the circumstance that the actual delivered power output is increased from 80 to 92 horsepower, with speed, hill-climbing ability and other operating features correspondingly bettered.

A new clutch incorporates an interesting "torsion neutralizer", which absorbs not only the shocks due to starting and stopping, but also the drive irregularities incident to travel over rough roads.

Test First U.S. Rocket Auto

SCONA JUNIORS BATTLE ELITES IN SEMI-FINAL

Winner of "Sudden-Death" Game; Play-off With Junior Esks

Art Potter's Elites will clash with the Scona Juniors at the Arena on Sunday afternoon in a sudden-death semi-final to decide which team will meet the Junior Eskimos in a three-game series for the championship of the Junior Hockey League. Play will start at 3 o'clock sharp.

These two clubs are well matched and, with a chance to get into the play-off at stake, there should be some interesting hockey dished up for the fans who follow the junior pastimers.

This is the third season that the Elites have been together as a team and in that time they have compiled an enviable record. Two years ago they were runners-up for the championship and last year waded through all opposition to cop the city honors. This season they again hope to satisfy their supporters by going through to the title.

The Scona Juniors, coached by Bob McDiarmaid, though playing their first season together, have kept up with the leaders all along and are worthy of the support of South Side Fans.

Close in Goal Scoring

Goal averages show that the three leading clubs were closely bunched in respect to scoring during the schedule just finished. The Elites scored a total of 28, with 17 allowed to their opposition; Scona had 24 and 18 against them; the Junior Eskimos netted the rubber 25 times while allowing 18 to their opponents.

The play-downs, judging by these statistics, should be hard-fought affairs from start to finish.

Jim Kinney will handle the bell in Sunday's battle.

Line-up

Elites: Goal, Warner; defence, Flaws, G. Rutter; forwards, Green, Hague Allard, Horne, Riddell, Walker.

Scona Juniors: Goal, Blanchett; defence, Keiffer, White; forwards, Brown, Copeland, McTavish, Talbot, Moir, Gervinka.

ESKS BEATEN 4-2 BY LIONS ON HOME ICE

Vancouver in Lead 4-0 Till Seattle Team Scored In Third

SEATTLE, Feb. 9.—Vancouver doubled the score on Seattle in a Pacific Coast Hockey League fixture here last night to win the encounter 4 to 2. The Lions had things pretty much their own way for the first two periods and half of the third before the Eskimos took a hand in the scoring. The Lions scored one in the first, two in the second and one in the first half of the final session before the locals netted their counters.

Two goals, both scored by Cec Browne, on nifty passes from Jack Walker, were all that the Eskimos could score in these last two minutes. Young Percy Jackson, the midget Vancouver goal tender, had the busiest ten minutes of his young life in keeping the net results of the Seattle rally to such a low score. It was Jackson who really made this victory for the Lions possible. The Eskimos were in on him often enough to win three or four ordinary games but he simply would not let down and not until the game was apparently safe in the Vancouver win column were the battling Eskimos able to get by him.

GREAT WINTER CLASSIC OPENS WITH WELL-BALANCED PROGRAM

Galaxy of Brilliant Steel Blade Artists Please Large Crowd With Their Acts—Many Thrilling Stunts Are Provided

With a nicely balanced program and with the delightful fancy skating by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Starky and Mrs. Verna Miles featuring the bill, the two-day Rotary club winter carnival got under way Friday night at the Arena and the crowd of skating fans who journeyed to the Exhibition grounds were treated to frills, thrills and a few spills by a long list of entertainers on steel blades.

The poetry of motion with the aid of steel blades on a smooth glistening ice surface was amply demonstrated by the skaters who provided real entertainment.

In addition to the seasoned stars of the ice, members of the Glenora Skating Club contributed to the entertainment and it was shown that Edmonton has real material in its young folks.

GRACE AND SKILL IN THEIR NUMBERS

The numbers by Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Starky and Mrs. Verna Miles were among the highlights of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Starky performing difficult double spins while Mrs. Miles and Mrs. Starky showed grace and skill in their numbers together and were the objects of continued plaudits by the crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. Starky performed a sensational spin when the latter clung to the neck of her partner only with her feet and was spun through the air in quick circles. This event is considered to be one of the most daring and dangerous attempted by fancy skaters.

Gordon Thompson, Vancouver star, thrilled the crowd with his sensational jumps over eight barrels set in a row, while he also performed his "human top" spins. Racing around the arena Mr. Thompson hurled himself into the air and landed safely, with inches to spare, over the last barrel.

Little Miss Gets Hand

Another feature was the appearance of Miss Bunty Noble, 13, who took the 1929 figure skating junior titles at Banff. The dainty little miss performed wonderfully on her skates in the glare of a single spotlight while the rest of the building was in darkness. The crowd gave her a big hand for her performance.

Due to troubles in making train connections, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gunberg, professionals of the Calgary Skating Club, were unable to arrive in time to make their scheduled appearance but they have wired to the carnival officials that they will be on hand for the Saturday night performance. The Calgary Club eight also were unable to get to the city in time but will appear Saturday night.

Juveniles Were Good

The first part of the evening performance was given by the juvenile stars of the Glenora Skating Club. In colorful costumes the youngsters separated into different groups and showed their skill as skaters. Little-boy soldiers in spick and span uniforms pulled a large decorated sleigh bearing the Snow Princess, Gertrude Hyndman, onto the ice and various groups of girls performed in front of her.

The children showed real talent and experience on their skates and the crowd seemed to thoroughly enjoy the entertainment.

Wooden soldiers:—Donald Dick, I. McPherson, D. Thompson, E. Hunt, D. Drages, P. Nash, D. Walkinshaw, B. Carter, D. McBeth, R. Hall, M. Wolfe, S. Belyea, C. Steer, S. Balfour, R. Gray, R. McClung and D. Archibald. The captain was L. McPherson.

Princes:—R. McBride, D. Graves and the Hall twins; fairies, Mary Hall, Ann Archibald and Ann Lewis; snowballs, Mary Imrie, Betty Dick, Hether Collins, M. McKay, M. Freidman, E. Leiberman, E. Carpenter, Rena Wishart, Charolotte Anderson, June Brown, Molly Pearson, Martha Ruby, Ruth Jamieson, Mollie McLean, B. Nash, A. Brown, C. Brown, M. Hurry, R. Woods, B. Milne, L. Macauley, A. MacBride; stars, P. O'Connor, A. Tighe, M. Jamieson, D. Thomson, J. McMurchy, P. Pitfield, G. Hieslen, B. Brown, H. Collins, M. Sutherland, E. Mitchell, Mary MacBeth, M. Budd, May Craig, Kay Nash, Marion Bell, D. Barnhouse; members of the icicle ballet, D. Garrett, J. Allsopp, D. Johnson, L. Cook, J. MacLean, P. Allen, J. Hunt, A. M. Carpenter, H. Taylor and S. McDonald.

The children, during their period on the ice, were led by Olaf Anderson professional at the Glenora Skating Club, who was dressed as a bear—and a good one at that.

Great Entertainers

Gordon Thompson and May Fielding, also of Vancouver, delighted the audience with their "Death Dance." Mr. Thompson was dressed in a skeleton suit and Miss Fielding in a flowing "spooky" costume. The lights in the building were turned out and only a single spotlight was turned on the pair as they made delicate twists and turns upon the ice.

The same pair returned later in the evening to give their hilarious skit "Hick Perkins and the 1929 Flapper" on skates.

Float About The Ice

Mrs. Starky and Mrs. Verna Miles, Edmonton's own skating queens, delighted the audiences with their skating. With each stroke of a skate placed easily and surely and with no rasping sound as the steel touched the ice, they seemed to float about the arena. Their act was really beautiful and wonderful to witness. They gave their performance in a finished and polished manner and easily proved to be one of the features of the entertainment.

Four juniors, coming stars in figure skating, pleased the audience. They were Donalda Johnson, Dorothy Garrett, June Allsopp and Peggy Aitken.

A Spanish Scene

The second part of the performance was devoted to a Spanish scene "In Old Madrid," and included a mixed tango, a spanish fandango, and an Argentine tango feature by Mrs. Starky and Olaf Anderson. The comedy was introduced by a bull fight, with Bill Freeman and W. Winkler clothing themselves in make-believe cowskin and acting the part of the bull. The toreadors who tormented the tormented the life out of the bull were Dick Colthart, Allan MacDonald, Jack Preston and John Hillas. Bob Peel made an admirable movie man.

Those taking part in the mixed tango were Mrs. Astle, Mrs. Griesbach, Mrs. Maddocks, Mrs. Williams, Miss Egbert, Miss Underwood, Miss Pickford, Miss Trowbridge, and Messrs. Freestone, McPherson, MacLean, Dr. McDonald and Dr. Jamieson.

Those in the Spanish Fandango numbers were Mrs. Perraton Croox, Mrs. Irma May, Miss Mary Archibald, Miss Dorothy Williams, Mrs. Hardisty, Miss Dorothy Archibald, Miss Maimee Aylin and Miss Sybil Primrose.

Was Hilarious Event

The "fat men" relay race was one of the hilarious spots of the evening, the well-padded fat men providing real comedy. The Gyro team won the "race." The well-padded gentlemen who took part were:—Gyros, Frank Mills, E. Duncan, J. Thompson; Kiwanis, Hugh Kelly, D. McFarlane, and C. C. McCall; Rotary, H. M. E. Evans, Mr. Henry and Mr. Payne.

Mrs. Starky and Mrs. Miles again pleased with their Pierrot and Pierrette number, continuing with the same fine skating form exhibited in their first appearance earlier in the evening.

The Edmonton Club eight also featured the evening with their skating. The members were Misses Scarth, Wilkin, Aylen, Perriton, and Messrs. J. B. Starky, Primrose, Sydie and Day.

Altogether it was a fine performance and with the addition of the Calgary entertainers and the correction of very minor mistakes, Saturday's entertainment will undoubtedly go over with a bang.

THREE ALBERTA SPEED CROWNS TO LOCAL BOY

Marion McCarthy Defeats Rivals in Speed Skating Events

Marion McCarthy, fleet-winged Edmonton speed-skater, annexed three titles in the Alberta Amateur speed-skating championship events held at the Arena, Friday night, during the Rotary Club winter carnival, taking first place in the 880 yard, two mile and 220 yard distances.

After a fall near the first of the race, McCarthy overcome a big lead and won the 880 yard battle easily in 1 minute, 31 2-5 seconds. He took the senior title in the two mile distance in 7 minutes and 8 2-5 seconds, and 220 yard senior championship in 1 minute 45 3-5 seconds.

The results of the races are as follows:—

Senior 880 yard race, for Alberta title. 1. Marion McCarthy, 1:31 2-5; 2. Albert Hardy; 3. Arthur Myers.

Junior, 220 yard race, for Alberta title. 1. Charles Frame, 28 seconds; 2. Clarence Downey; 3. A. D. Hamilton.

Senior mile race, for Alberta title. 1. McCarthy, 7:8 2-5; 2. Albert Hardy; 3. A. Myers.

Junior, 880 yard dash, for Alberta title. 1. Charles Frame, 1:45 3-5; 2. K. D. Hamilton; 3. Clarence Downey.

220 yard, Senior, for Alberta title. 1. McCarthy, :25 1-5; 2. Hardy; 3. Myers.

The racers were handicapped somewhat by the narrow turns at the four corners of the rink and they were from two to a half dozen spills in each event, the skaters losing their grip on the ice due to the sharpness of the turns.

JEWELRY CLASS BEING REACHED 'PEG BONSPIEL

Four Undefeated Rinks In Draw Up To Last Night

WINNIPEG, Feb. 9.—There were only four undefeated rinks in the Manitoba Curling Association's forty-first annual bonspiel when play in Friday's four draws concluded last night.

Those who continued their triumphant march toward the jewelry classes were Ness Wise, Gil Stannard, Peter McDiarmid and Ken Watson, all of Winnipeg and veterans of the rock and broom pastime.

Marked progress in the Dingwall featured the play Friday and tonight the fours were reached in this competition, while in the Birks trophy two rinks had reached the fours.

Stannard, of the local St. Johns club, remained in the unbeaten class by a victory over McDonald, of Fort William. The score was 10 to 8. Previously, McDonald had won from Sangster, Winnipeg, 8 to 7, but his loss to Stannard eliminated him from the Dingwall competition.

Of the western curlers, Barkwell, of Yellowgrass, Sask., had a good day winning two matches in the Purity Flour event. First he eliminated Guguid, Swan Lake, 10 to 7, and then won from Robson, Winnipeg, by a score of 13 to 10.

Houston, of Assiniboia, maintained his position in the Dingwall, defeating Stewart, Winnipeg 12 to 10, but was eliminated from the Purity by Manwaring, Birtle, 11-10.

After losing a match in the early draw, McKenzie and his Welwyn curlers were back in the form in later play, and eliminated Mitchell, of the Deer Lodge club, from the Purity, 13 to 10.

IZZY SWARTZ WINS DECISION

Flyweight Champion's Fine Display to Win By Good Margin

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—Corporal Izzy Schwartz, recognized by the New York boxing commission as flyweight champion of the world, won a 10 round decision over "Frenchy" Belanger, Canadian title holder and former world's champion at the Coliseum here last night.

Although he failed to knock Belanger off his feet during the battle Schwartz earned the decision by a good margin.

The boys fought at catch weights and the title was not involved. Schwartz weighed 108 1-2 and Belanger 113.

A snappy left jab to the face mixed with a right that crossed to Frenchy's chin, piled up points for the champion. Belanger tried to fight his way through to the elusive target, but outstanding in Schwartz' defence was his cleverness in tying up Frenchy as the Canadian champion attempted to wade in with a swinging attack.

"Can you imagine the arm of the ocean around a neck of land?"

"Why not? I have hugged the shore myself?"

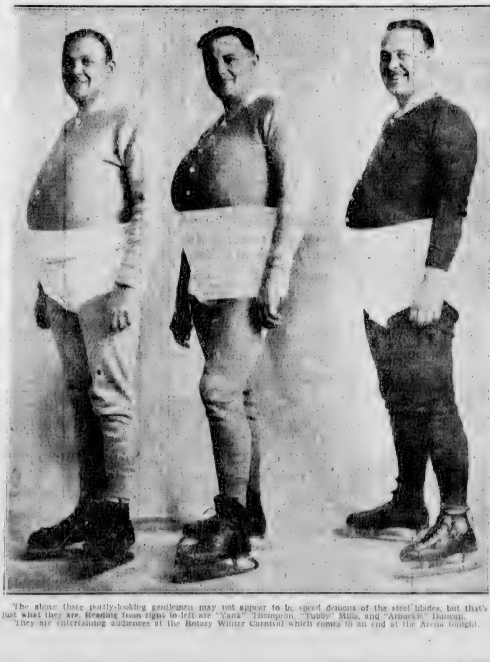
Gyro Speed Marvels



The above three portly-looking gentlemen may not appear to be speed demons of the steel blades, but that's just what they are. Reading from right to left are "Yank" Thompson, "Tubby" Mills, and "Arbuckle" Duncan.

They are entertaining audiences at the Rotary Winter Carnival which comes to an end at the Arena tonight.

IMPORTANT HOCKEY CONTEST IS SCHEDULED FOR TONIGHT

Elks and Superiors Clash in Senior Amateur League Game Which Has Important Bearing on Chances of Both Clubs

SENIOR LEAGUE STANDING

	P	W	L	D	F	A	Pts.
Superiors	11	7	4	0	40	26	14
Maple Leafs	11	7	4	0	45	31	14
Elks	10	6	4	0	34	30	12
Varsity	10	1	9	0	25	58	2

One of the most important Senior Amateur Hockey League games of the present season is scheduled for tonight when George Cristall's Elks tangle with the Superiors at Varsity Rink. Play is billed for 8.15 sharp.

A berth in the play-off practically hangs in the balance in this evening's fixture. A win for the Superiors will put them "in," while if the Antlered Herd comes through with a triumph, they will create a three-cornered tie for first place and the "Soops," will have to sit back, hoping that Varsity will knock either them or the Maple Leafs over and thus give them another chance to figure in the finals.

PLENTY AT STAKE IN THIS STRUGGLE

This just serves to show how much is at stake when the two aggregations skate out on the ice and to pick a winner would be no job for an ordinary layman. Both outfits realize that a licking would be almost a death-blow to their play-off aspirations, so they are determined to battle every inch of the way.

Both Confident

Supporters of the two clubs are confident of a win for their particular favorites but it looks far from a certainty for either to a casual observer. It is a test for both the Elks and the Stuart clan and if either one does not hit its usual stride, it will probably mean relegation to the ranks of the also rans.

Stan Stephens will handle the bell in tonight's game.

Probable Line-ups

Superiors: Goal, Stuart; defence Hills, Faulder; forwards, Graham Walker, Crossland, Foster, Jenkins Bonneyman.

Elks; Goal, Howey; defence, W. Kinney, B. Ferris; forwards, Esdale, Dame, G. Ferris, Duggan, Leanord, Paul Maher.

Bonspiel Pick-ups

Everything has gone along smoothly so far in Edmonton's twelfth annual bonspiel and if the weather man is good to yo curlers for the rest of the time the event is in progress, you can bet this year's 'spiel will be one of the best on the record books.

Monday night is the big night for curlers. Yes sir. They're going to make big "whoopee" in the Rose Room of the King Edward hotel when the annual meeting and banquet takes place. This will be a banner night for the gang and some splendid entertainment in the way of vocal and musical selections has been lined up.

Bill Matthews, the great big "draw expert" discovered an interesting bit of information while gazing through his charts last night. The said Mr. Matthews found that George Carmichael of the local Granite club was drawn against Bill Pocock of Unity, Saskatchewan in three different events. Someone suggested that the rinks play only one game to decide the three. That gentleman must be finding the going a little bit too hard.

While the weather has been ideal for curling several sheets of ice were put out of commission for a time yesterday when water from the roof spattered down causing ridges to form on the ice. These sheets were put back into commission later by the club caretakers without much difficulty.

"Chuck" Henderson is taking a keen interest in the 'spiel. He has been on hand daily since the opening and is following very closely the fortunes of Walter Blackett's rink. Maybe that is why Bill Brockie hasn't been playing up to form.

Tom Lorimer of Lacombe is still his genial self. He is one of the hardest working skips at the 'spiel and can still heave a mean rock.

George McKee got quite a start last night, while endeavoring to call out on the headquarter's telephone. He was ringing the Royal rink when a feminine voice demanded to know what he wanted. "Is that the Royal Curling Club" asked Mr. McKee in a nice pleasing manner. "No you're all wet" was the snappy retort and the party banged up in George's ear, and how. Wrong number.

One curler handed the crowd a laugh yesterday when he skidded on the frozen surface, did a couple of fancy twirls and landed solidly on his back. Good thing the photographer wasn't on the job. Might have been good material for "Embarrassing Moments."

ASSEMBLY OF TRACK STARS AT NEW YORK

Twenty - Second Annual Of Millrose Games This Evening

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—With a field that comes close to making it an indoor Olympic meet, the twenty-second annual running of the Millrose A.A. games will be held in Madison Square Garden tonight. A large Canadian aggregation in addition to Edvin Wide and Paavo Nurmi, visiting stars of Sweden and Finland, will compete against the pick of United States runners in half a dozen headline events.

Bearing the number one as a tribute to his double Olympic victory, Percy Williams, young Canadian sprinter will head the field in the short distance events. In a special 50-yard dash, Williams will oppose such stars as Jimmy Quinn, of Holy Cross, Karl Wildermuth, of Georgetown, intercollegiate indoor sprint champion, Cecil Bowman, Newark A.C., and L. D. Hamm, former Georgia Tech ace. The young Canadian also will run in the international medley relay race, opposing Frank Hussey, on the 220-yard leg.

In the longer races, Europe's great rivals, Nurmi and Wide, will display their wares in separate events.

Feature Event

In the "Millrose 600" feature of the meet since 1915, Jimmy Ball, of Winnipeg, will test his speed on the boards against Bernie McCafferty, young Holy Cross star, Phil Edwards of New York University, a fellow member of the Canadian Olympic team, Oliver Proudlock, of Newark, and Frankie Burns of Boston.

The Canadian girls' relay team, which turned in a sensational performance in its Olympic victory, will run intact against a quartette from the United States which will include three Olympic runners. A final international event brings Harry Hinkel of New York and Mack Weiss, of Newark, leading heel and toe artists of the United States, against Henry Cieman and Reg. Howell, of Canada, in a one mile walk.

QUITE IMPOSSIBLE

The teacher was telling a story to the kindergarten, and interest was intense.

"So that night the wicked red fox came and stole a chicken. The next night he came and stole another. And the next night he came and stole another chicken. And——" dramatic pause—"what do you suppose happened the next night?"

"Oh, teacher," panted Peter, "Did he git another chicken?"

EYE FOR BUSINESS

During army manoeuvres a movie operator got in the way and aroused the ire of a battalion commander. He shouted to his adjutant:

"Order that blasted fool to clear out and ask him why the blankety-blank he brought his camera here."

The officer trotted off to carry out the order. On his return his colonel said:

"Well, what did he say?"

"He said that he apologized for bringing his camera and he wished he had brought a movietone instead."

THREE LOCAL, ONE VISITING SKIP HAVE CLEAN RECORD

Harold Deeton, Bill Carse, George Wanless and Henry Trimble of Lacombe Had Yet to Suffer First Setback Up to Last Night

Only four rinks came through the second day of the Alberta Curling Association's 'spiel now under way here with a clean record. They were Harold Deeton of the Royal, Bill Carse of the Thistle, George Wanless, Granite and one lone visitor, Henry Trimble of Lacombe.

After the last draw had been run off last night a check-up showed Deeton with six victories to the good. Trimble also had captured six wins in as many starts, but he was credited with one in the visitor's competition which does not count in the Grand Aggregate. Wanless had chalked up five wins while Carse had taken all four of his starts so far.

SEVERAL STRONG RINKS MET THEIR "WATERLOO"

Several strong rinks, which had been setting a hot pace on Thursday met their "Waterloo" yesterday at the hands of aggregations of only average strength. Lorimer, Bentley, was knocked out of further play in the E.C.D. primary event by Bill Carse in a thrilling thirteen end tussle, 11-10. He had been undefeated up to that time.

Joe Heartwell, Rosetown, Sask., who did not arrive in the city until late Thursday night got away to a good start in the early draw when he won from Dave Airth of the local Royal club. However, Joe and his pets slipped up a couple of notches later on in the day, after having won their second game from Potts, in the E.C.D. The veteran George McLaughlin, of Tofield handed the Rosetown boys their first setback in a loose battle at the Edmonton club 10-5.

Seller Is Winner

Heartwell came right back in the 6 o'clock draw but fared no better against Seller, Granite. The local skip advanced to the sixteens of the Grand Challenge by stopping the visitors quite easily by the score of 13 to 8.

Play yesterday was confined mostly to the two primary events, Edmonton City Dairy and the New Edmonton Breweries (grand challenge), and also the Eaton competition, secondary to the grand challenge. Several games in the visitors trophy were on the day's card while a start was made on the Bank of Montreal event, secondary to the E.C.D.

Five games were played on the late draw in the King Edward (visitors vs all-comers) and it is expected that this competition will be in full swing today.

Grand Challenge Sixteens

The sixteens have been reached in the Grand Challenge with the following skips surviving: Lorimer, Lacombe; Deeton, Royal; Wanless, Granite; Douglas, Rosetown; Manahan, Royal; Edmond, Scona; Mohler, Camrose; Roper, Salvador; Seller, Granite; Pocock, Unity; Carmichael, Granite; Campbell, Edmonton; Blackett, Edmonton; Carse, Thistle; Hahn, Royal.

Play in this event will be narrowed down today and the eights will be reached with the jewelry stage on tap for early next week.

Visitors in Primaries

While the visiting rinks have not done so well in the Grand Challenge six have advanced to the sixteens of the other primary competition, and there will likely be several more stick in if they keep playing up to form displayed yesterday.

Mohler's strong Camrose rink has been setting a fast pace in the two main open competitions, taking four games without a setback. In the play for the visitors trophy, however, they lost in the initial round to Dr. Heaslip Mannville.

Pocock Doing Well

W. E. Pocock, Unity, is breezing along nicely in the Grand Challenge brushing many strong rinks to one side in the dash toward the jewelry. However, this rink had a close call in the noon draw yesterday when the Saskatchewan boys hooked up with Slavik, Viking, in a thirteen ender at the Granite rink. After leading going home, the Albertans tied up the count only to lose out on the extra end.

Real Encounter

Chapman, Lacombe, had a real fight on his hands in disposing of Freeman Herschel, in the afternoon draw at the Edmonton club in the E.C.D. competition. After being two points down going home, Chapman by steady curling chalked up a two on the twelfth and forced the contest into overtime. Both rinks were playing at the top of their form and it looked like a toss up as to which one would win. And it was as close as that because the Lacombe skip won the game with his last rock, with a neat draw in to the button when Freeman was lying two. Freeman had a chance to pull through for a victory but his final stone missed and went through the house.

Freeman ... 030 200 210 030 0—11

Blackett Wins Over Neale

Walter Blackett took a nice game from Reg. Neale in the afternoon draw 11-8. Walter made a good start by scoring four on the first end, but Reg crept up by ones until he had things tied up on the sixth. Blackett then took the lead with a two by some nice curling and after the next end went by blank, Neale enlivened proceedings with a neat little three to take a one point lead.

Evidently Blackett and his boys Carter, Brockie and Williscroft, didn't like trailing the Scona rink for they settled right down to work and by brilliant curling counted five on the eleventh. This was the deciding point as Neale gave up on the final end after Blackett had kept the house clean.

Blackett .... 400 000 200 5—11

Heart-breaking Game

Neale also took another heart-breaking defeat from George McLaughlin of Tofield in the Eaton competition. The game was closely contested throughout with a three being the largest end chalked up. The visitor had to do some real curling on the final end to keep the local rink from deadlocking the count, but the game went 9 to 7 in his favor.

Deeton vs. Darke

Several other good games were on the day's draws and Deeton vs. Darke featured the games at the Royal club in the late play. Deeton managed to keep his record clean after Dark made a determined bid for victory on the closing ends. Deeton, however, was playing a whale of a draw game and he just couldn't seem to miss and he took the verdict 9 to 7.

Age, Not Youth Served in the Pitcher's Box

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

The old fellows linger longer on the mound than in any other position in baseball. The answer is that, while a pitcher may decline physically after thirty, he adds to his effectiveness by employing the cunning that years of experience pile up in his mind.

Jack Quinn and Urban Faber are two patriarchs that are still going as strong as ever in their forties. Both are "spitters" and the strange feature of this is that a "spitter" always was looked upon as being most wearing on the arm.

Grover Cleveland Alexander is another shining example of longevity. Old Pete has won 364 games and lost only 197 since bowing his way into the majors in 1911.

Both Burleigh Grimes and Dazzy Vance admit having gone past their thirty-fifth milestone. Grimes had the best year he ever enjoyed winning 25 and losing 14, while Vance fanned 200 hitters.

The old adage that "youth must be served" still holds good in baseball but not in the pitcher's box.

Young Woman Holds Up Detroit Bank

Associated Press

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 8.—A young woman walked into a branch of the Michigan State bank of Detroit shortly before noon today, fired two tear gas bombs, held up the teller and escaped with $2,000. She walked up to the cashier's window, according to Thomas Witnowski, teller, and fired the first bomb. She then presented a note demanding $2,000. Fearing she was armed, Witnowski handed her the money. Before walking out of the office and driving away in a large coupe she fired the second bomb.

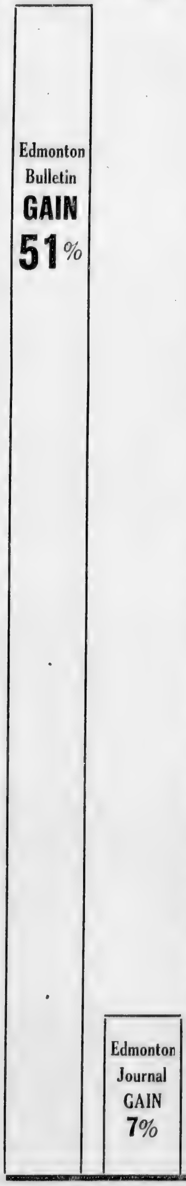
BEEF GRADING

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—Beef grading in Canada will be established within a few days under regulations framed by the dominion government, R. S. Hamer, chief of the cattle division of the department of agriculture, announced at the annual meeting of the Ontario cattle breeders' association Friday.

The proposed system will be a voluntary one and will be confined to municipalities where there is a facility for inspection and grading at the time of killing, he said.

SOME FIGHTING MAN

WINNIPEG, Feb. 9.—The fighting prowess of Robert Woolard saved him his bank roll of $43 last night. Overpowered by two assailants, Woolard was relieved of $43. Recovering from the shock, he pursued the robbers, caught the one with his roll, regained possession of it and administered a severe beating to him. Then he captured the second one, punished him with his fists and then permitted both to escape.



Do the People of Edmonton Want a Fair, Independent Newspaper?

Yes, and HOW!

It does not take a magician to show how the Edmonton Bulletin, improved and strengthened under its present ownership and management, has not only recorded the greatest circulation growth of any Alberta daily newspaper, but has recorded an achievement that is outstanding in Canadian newspaperdom — a gain of 51 percent in average daily net paid circulation over a period of three years.

In thirty-six months the Edmonton Bulletin has shown an average daily gain of 5901 subscribers, or 23,604 additional readers, representing in itself a big city of alert people with responsive Buying Power.

Yet this great addition to the reader family of the Edmonton Bulletin is but a part of the 72,608 readers who regularly read the Edmonton Bulletin for their city, national and world news and for important announcements of Edmonton merchants and national manufacturers.

In the fact that the percentage circulation growth of the Edmonton Bulletin during the last three years has been many times that of any other Alberta daily newspaper, there is reflected substantial, sustained and uniform increase in distribution, reader acceptance and greater influence in the upbuilding of business and the community.

More people, by the thousands, have subscribed to the Edmonton Bulletin during the last three years than any other Alberta daily newspaper, because they recognize in the Edmonton Bulletin a newspaper of Character, a newspaper that prints all the news and prints it first, a newspaper that is welcomed into the homes because it is fair and complete, a newspaper that has its only interests in the further development of Edmonton and Alberta, a newspaper that is forceful and fearless in fighting for "If It Will Help Alberta the Bulletin Is For It", and because the Edmonton Bulletin is a Better Newspaper.

Ninety-five out of every 100 copies of the Edmonton Bulletin produced every day are Delivered to the Homes. No stronger evidence of the strength of a newspaper could be offered than such pronounced acceptance in the homes.

The accompanying chart shows the percentage of increase in circulation of the Edmonton daily newspapers during the last three years, based on the publishers' sworn statements of circulation as of February 1, 1926, and February 1, 1929.

Gains Reduced by Flood of Offerings—Coarse Grains Strengthen

By James Richardson & Sons, Ltd.

WINNIPEG, Feb. 9.—Price bulges on today's wheat market were the signals for a flood of offerings and consequently all gains were reduced. The market finished the day ⅛ cent to ⅜ cent higher. Good buying by continental houses occurred today.

Cash wheat was in demand, grades numbers 4 and 5, leading the trade and showing an advance of ⅛ cent. Other grades were unchanged.

The coarse grain market strengthened. Flax was run up 2⅜ cents and barley recorded gains. Oats held steady. Rye closed with only a fractional increase.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—Wheat prices averaged higher early today and corn lower, largely a a result of spread transactions in which wheat was bought against sales of corn. Pessimistic crop reports from Central Europe and severe low temperatures in Kansas and Nebraska tended to encourage buyers of wheat. Opening unchanged to ⅛ cent to ⅜ cent off, wheat scored some advance all around.

Corn started at ⅛ to ⅜ cent decline and subsequently underwent a general sag. Oats were easier and provisions showed firmness.

LIVERPOOL MARKET

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 9.—Wheat not quoted.

Winnipeg Grain Letter

By James Richardson & Sons Ltd,

WINNIPEG, Feb. 9—The wheat market again ruled steady with a good class of buying in evidence. Offerings were again liberal on the upturn, coming principally from the elevator interests. Overnight business was reported at 300,000 bushels, and private cables stressed the severely cold weather throughout Europe and the probability of some crop damage as a result. Temperatures were also much below normal in the American southwest, but most districts reported a good snow covering. Broomhall again draws attention to the fact that over four million bushels of the southern hemisphere shipments this week are going to non-European countries, and this demand is expected to continue as long as present prices continue. The general situation appears to be growing increasingly encouraging to holders of wheat.

EDMONTON STOCKYARDS, Feb. 8.—(D.L.B.)—Receipts: cattle 735, calves 138, hogs 1968, sheep 572.

From the opening days of the week to the close, the market was decidedly dull and trading slow and draggy, with salesmen finding it very hard to effect clearances of their offerings. Buyers were decidedly indifferent in their bidding and the general outlet, particularly for beef cattle, was restricted and narrow, and although sales were made at about steady prices with last week'sclose yet general indications showed a weak undertone to values. Stockers and feeders were also none too active but prices held fairly steady. There was a good brisk demand for calves, particularly choice light vealers, and this class of stock sold at fully steady values.

On the hog market the fore part of the week a few loads sold at $10.10 for thick smooths, fed and watered, and the balance of the week thick smooths sold at $10, with selects brining a 60 cent premium. Note: following new hog cuts—extra heavies 1½ cents, No. 1 sows 2 cents, No. 2 sows 2½ cents and roughs 3½ cents, effective Monday, February 11.

Sheep and lambs were somewhat stronger during this week; good to choice lambs generally sold at $12 to $13, good to choice yearlings $9 to $10 and good to choice butcher ewes $6.50 to $8.

Following are the ruling cattle prices: Bulk of the good to choice steers sold at $8.25 to $8.75, baby beeves bringing higher prices, medium steers from $8 down. Good to choice heifers $7.50 to $8, medium $7 down. A few exceptionally choice handyweight cows sold up to $7, bulk of the good to choice kinds selling at $6.25 to $6.75, medium kinds from $6 down. Canners and cutters $3.50 to $4.50. Bulls $5 to $6. Stocker and feeder steers sold from $7.50 down, stocker cows and heifers $5 to $6.50. Good to choice vealers $12 to $14, good heavy calves $8 to $9 and plain calves from $8 down.

CALGARY MARKET

Wall Street Journal

By James Richardson & Sons

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—Stocks scored only temporary improvement today on the maintenance of the New York rate of 5 per cent. Short coverings on this development caused a rally in the morning dealings. But great nervousness was in evidence in speculative quarters of the special meeting of the local Federal Reserve directors called for Monday.

Many traders decided to reduce long committments until the results of this meeting were known and selling of the character revived the downward movement around noon. Additional liquidation was induced by a decided scarcity of funds in the demand market. Banks called loans heavily in connection with the week-end adjustments of reserves. Offerings to replace these withdrawals were discouraged by the Federal Reserve warning, and the rate moved up first to 7 per cent. and then to 8 per cent., before sufficient money was attracted to satisfy requirements. Stiffness in call accommodations had a depressing influence on sentiment regarding the immediate position of the speculative structure. As the normal tendency at this season is toward easement, development of an opposite trend was interpreted to mean that corporations which had been placing funds in the market were showing a disposition to heed the banking admonitions against this practice.

In view of the tremendous increase in loans for the account "of others" during the past year, it was argued that large withdrawals of funds of this character would have a severe demand loan market. Apprehension on this score was translated into substantial offerings of stocks and the downward movement steadily picked up momentum in the afternoon. Further new lows on the current reaction were reached during the last hour by the principal trading stocks, and the whole market displayed a heavy tone.

United Electric Coal has been well bought on the recent break, due to the imminence of an announcement regarding a consolidation with other coal companies and properties. United Electric Coal is a stripping proposition, having costs sufficiently low to permit of good net earnings during recent years when other soft coal producers were facing many obstacles. According to plans of the management an increase in the current dividend has been completed. It is expected that net earnings will show a substantial increase through additional efficiency and economies.

Weekly Review

By James Richardson & Sons

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—Striking testimony to the effectiveness of the rigid morginal requirements insisted upon by local brokers for some time past was re-afforded by the reaction of the Montreal stock market during the past week due entirely to outside influences. The disturbance caused in Wall Street by the latest action of the Federal Reserve oard to curb speculation and the increase in the Bank of England rediscount rate cause a downward movement to set in at mid-week which cancelled a large portion of gains scored by many issues in recent weeks. In the widespread desire to sell however, prices gave way grudgingly and in the great majority of cases there was a market on a moderately declining scale for all offerings that appeared. The development was in the nature of a technical correction, and as usual in such circumstances after prices had reacted appreciably, buyers who had kept out of the market awaiting such an opportunity made their appearance and helped materially by steadying prices at critical periods. Selling pressure by small speculative holders, however, resulted in rallies being short lived and final prices were aroused the low levels for the week.

As was to be expected, active leaders such as International Nickel, Brazilian Traction, Power Corpn., Dominion Bridge and several others were the first to feel the effect of the change in sentiment. Considering the huge floating supply of both Nickel and Brazilian it may be said they acted in impressive fashion. At no time was there an indication of a severe break and the declines were in the nature of an orderly retreat rather than a sudden withdrawal of support. In the other cases a few issues that had been rushed up quickly suffered for the unwarranted bidding up of prices and came down in a hurry. Power Corporation and Dominion Bridge were examples of this, and both issues fell over 10 points from their recent peak prices. Other public utilities were steadier with Montreal Power, Shawinigan and Quebec Power showing more moderate declines.

The constructive developments pending in Canadian Car and Foundry were lost sight of, and both the preferred and common stocks were heavily losers in the desire on the part of a few holders to realize some of their paper profits. National Steel car was afected to a less extent, but sold off along with the other stocks on the list.

The most severe loss of the week was experienced by Consolidated Smelters, which had such a precipitate advance. On sales of only a few hundred shares the stock dropped below the 500 mark, for an extreme reaction of nearly 70 points. The strong pool which has recently taken an active interest in Hamilton Bridge was an important factor in the wide fluctuation which took place in the stock. After breaking more than 10 points from its high record price, it recovered eight, but was again allowed to slip back close to the former low mark. Rumors of a merger of several Canadian structural steel companies have been the basis on which the advance in the stock was built up.

Massey Harris and Cockshutt Plow gave outstanding exhibitions of steadiness in the face of the general weakness. Massey Harris held firm around the 90 mark, and Cockshutt Plow was absorbed in fair volume within a few points of its former current level. On the curb market the particularly bright spot was Page Hersey. Following the appearance of the annual report, which covered the best year in the history of the company, the stock stood out as a rock of strength in the weakness that developed in other issues. Western Steel Products also acted remarkably well, being a new comer, to the list.

Oil stocks participated in the reactionary movement, with International Pete most severely affected. Distillers, Seagram, and Hiram Walker lost a portion of the advances scored previously on reports of a merger lof Canadian Distillery companies. Mines were comparatively quiet and showed few important changes.

Montreal Gazette

By James Richardson & Sons

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—Thus far in the reaction the local market has behaved in a highly orderly manner, giving evidence not only of the unusually strong marginal position which has been maintained by Canadian brokers, but also of the fact that a large buying power is available on any dips. Among the representative brokers on the street here it is found that thus far calls for margin have been practically negligible and in the majority of cases where these have been necessary they have been met with great promptness. Forced selling has been absent to a very considerable extent, with the liquidation largely created by nervous holders, who will once more come into the market when it gives evidence of having completed the re-adjustment process. International Nickel, which remained active leader, with a turnovr of 88,861 shars, had to withstand an unusually heavy selling attack which carried the stock down to 57¼ with the close at 58, representing a net loss of 2 points for the day. New York interests were the chief sellers, while buying on substantial scale was for Canadian accounts. Local opinion on the stock is as confident as ever and important local interests feel that current fluctuations should be ignored in consideration of the stock whose broad outlook is as bright as ever. Brazilian was second in volume with 16,271 shares dealt in, closed unchanged at 73, and having sold up to 74 during the early rally. This stock has given a better account of itself during the past few days of reaction, than bid in the several weeks which preceded. Its current action suggests that the technical position of the issue has greatly been improved within the past month.

Record Marketing Of 1928 Harvest

Canadian Press

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Feb. 9.—Record marketing of the 1928 wheat crop is noted in the report for January of E. A. Ursell, statistician to the board of grain commissioners.

At the end of January, 410,000,000 bushels out of the total wheat yield of 511,4444,000 bushels had been marketed at country points.

As but 210,000,000 bushels of this remained in store elevators in Canada and the United States, it would appear that already 200,000,000 bushels have been exported as wheat and flour, or consumed at home. In addition to the carry-over from last season which was of record proportions. After allowing 110,000,000 for home requirements, there would appear to be 225,000,000 bushels still available during the next six months for export.

Vancouver Stocks

By James Richardson & Sons

VANCOUVER, B.C., Feb. 9.—With but one or two exceptions the stock was weak yesterday although a heavy demand came out of the active issues on recessions.

Golconda was the feature in the early trading, moving up to 1.27 on sales of 75,000 shares, but finished at 1.24, up one. Pend Oreille, on a trade of 3000 shares improved 30 cents to 12.30. Oregon Copper the heaviest trader, opened a point firmer at 86, but sold down to 76 and came back to close at 80, a net loss of 5 cents.

Big Missouri on a light demand lost five cents to 1.95 and Grandview on sales of 74,000 was off 1¼ cents to 68¾. Kootenay Florence was in demand and closed one point stronger at 24½; Premier turned over at 2.11, unchanged and Reeves McDonald slipped back 10 cents to 3.10. Georgia River on sales of 82,000 gained ½ cent to 49 and corge Copper softened 35 cents to 10.75.

News From the Mines

By Solloway, Mills & Co., Ltd.
Solloway, Mills & Co., Ltd.

Noranda—It is estimated that Noranda's production last year amounted to approximately 33,000,000 pounds of copper together with $1,000,000 in gold and close to 200,000 ounces of silver. Before the end of this year is reached this output should at least be doubled. No difficulty should be encountered in developing the output as it is expected much ore will be drawn from the "H" ore body which is very much higher grade than other ore bodies on the upper levels from which ore is presently being drawn.

Noranda's new number four shaft has been completed to the 400 feet horizon and we understand that station cutting is now in progress at this level. A considerable showing of mineralization was cut before this level was reached. Some pyrrhotite being encountered.

MINING CORPORATION—Shaft sinking has again been resumed at Mining Corporation's Murray property in Rouyn, following the completion of a short crosscut towards Noranda's "G" ore body. The purpose of the crosscut was for geological data and to provide working stations for diamond drilling. Splendid results are undoubtedly expected at this property, as the steel head frame belonging to the Temiskaming Mine at Cobalt has been purchased and will be sent into the Murray Property immediately.

GRANADA—Recent development at Granada has greatly improved the prospects of this property. Drifting continues at the 378, 500 and 625, and is being carried in an easterly direction in a very strong vein of good widths. Some of the ore is stated to be spectacularly rich and a general improvement is looked forward to as they proceed eastword where previous diamond drilling indicated good velues and good structure for approximately 700 feet in that direction.

GOLCONDA—Recent strength and activity in the shares of Golconda on Vancouver stock exchange is undoubtedly due to Spokane reports that the vein at the 1400 foot level has been interaected. Up to yesterday 12 feet has been opened up with the hanging wall not yet reached. Ore from three separate veins is now going to the Golconda mill for treatment. It is presently anticipated that some dividend policy may be announced at the annual meeting of Golconda scheduled for February 20th.

BUCKINGHAM—A north country mining service reports that the Buckingham vein is holding strong, 160 foot level, showing considerable free gold, looks promising.

AMULET—Reports received from Rouyn last night indicated that the latest diamond drilling effort towards the "E" ore body had not been productive of favorable results. The report did not state whether or not the drill had as yet been pulled but since the probable zone of enrichment has been passed it is possible the drill was pulled.

Bliss Letter

By James Richardson & Sons

NEW YORK, Feb 9—Traders may have felt some relief because the N.Y. bank rate was not advanced yesterday, for the opening tone was quite firm and quiet. The recovery did not gain much headway, however, and early in the afternoon active selling began which left the market at the close in a highly unsettled state. Banks called money heavily and the call rate renewing at 6% went to 9%. This calling of loans was interpreted as a meaning that the banks were in accord with the Federal Reserve ideas and were restricting loans wherever such loans were presumably for the purpose of collateral leading. In more conservative quarters it was felt that the Federal Reserve authorities were in a fair way to demonstrate control over the money situation on the stocks. As the selling became aggressive in the afternoon it was probable that commission liquidation increased. The special meeting of the Federal Reserve directors scheduled for Monday was another factor which caused the Street to worry in as much they felt at that time there might be announced an increase in the local rediscount rate.

Toronto Mines

By Solloway, Mills & Co., Ltd.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—There was impressive resistance to an extremely weak undertone on the Standard Mining exchange. International Nickel was the heaviest loser of the day, falling back 2.75 to 57.50, after an early rise to 61.75. Noranda performed very well considering the general trend, and closed at 61.00, a loss of 50 cents. Outstanding was a spectacular mid-session advance in Falconbridge Nickel to a new peak of 12.00. The close was at 10.00 a net gain of 1.35.

Sudbury Basin soared to 10.00 and finished at 9.40, a net advance of 30 cents. Treadwell Yukon was 50 cents higher at 12.00.

Picard was again the leader in activity, but although an early peak of 9 cents was attained, the president's statement, published today, that no work was being done at the property, had the effect of causing an abrupt drop to 2½ cents. The tone was slightly firmer in the afternoon and the close stood at 4½ cents a loss of 3½ cents.

Amulet was off 10 cents to 2.70 and Abana off 5 cents to 2.55, both new low marks for the year.

Big Missouri had a comparatively quiet day and ended 10 cents lower at 1.90. Pend Oreille was unchanged at 11.50. A few shares of Coast Copper came out at 61.00, a decline of 2.25. Oregon Copper was off 10 cents to 90 cents. Grandview off 8 cents to 65 cents, Kootenay Florence down a cent to 23 cents and Lucky Jim down 3 cents to 19 cents.

Sherritt Gordon moved within the narrow range of 8.35 to 8.45, and finished at 8.30, unchanged. Hudson Bay Mining fell back 25 cents to 21.50. Manitoba Basin was down four cents to 42 cents, Mand. Mines down 5 cents to 1.40 and Central Manitoba down 2 cents to 64 cents.

Buckingham sold up to a new high of 15 cents and closed at 13 cents, a gain of 1¼ cents, standing second in point of activity.

Grain Gossip

By James Richardson & Sons Ltd.

Journal of Commerce—There is confidence in corn, due in part to the more liberal receipts and because the corn market when it starts going one way it usually continues. There is a great deal of talk of export business. A local cash corn handler was advised by his New York office that offerings corn made to Hamburg, Rotterdam, Italy, Ireland and the United Kingdom brought back answers to the effect that our prices were far out of line.

Liverpool—Lower owing to Saturday dullness.

Chicago: Broomhall—Frost in Europe been extraordinarily severe and there is some fear of damage. C.N.B.—Chicago wheat steady to fraction lower on scattered selling. Some support May around 137, the same has been in evidence of late. Chicago corn lower at start, on local selling, but no material pressure and a rally to above yesterday's finish followed. Trade largely local.

Europe: Broomhall—Official report stat esearly sowings strong and healthy, but some later rather discolored.

EMPLOYEES OF TRUDEAU ARE ENTERTAINED

New Management Hosts at Dinner, Concerts and Dance

The first annual banquet of the Trudeau staff took place at the Royal George hotel on Friday evening when over 100 employees were entertained by the new owners of the plant.

G. G. MacKenzie, of the Pantorium Dye works, in a short speech outlined the policy of the firm in connection with the employees, and promised the staff that a number of alterations to the plant were under consideration, and that work in these improvements, which would add greatly to the comfort of the employees would be started at once.

He appealed for the loyalty of the staff and promised in return that the management would do all in its power to make working conditions suitable to the employees.

H. P. Rocke, manager of the plant, acted as chairman and kept the action of the evening moving swiftly and smoothly.

Different members of the staff spoke briefly during the evening, pledging the various departments to loyalty to the new firm.

At the conclusion of the banquet a musical program was provided, the talent being recruited within the ranks of the employees. This concert was followed by a dance.

RUFFED GROUSE RETURNING SAY LOCAL SPORTS

Many Seen in Vicinity of Edmonton—Coming Well Through Winter

That the ruffed grouse is coming back as the result of the protection that has been extended by the closed season of the last two years, is the statement made by local naturalists and hunters.

This is corroborated by the fact that the bird is making its appearance inside the city limits. In the late fall a number of partridge were being found around the city, and quite recently a lot of the birds have again been noticed.

Grouse in City

One Edmonton citizen reports that some weeks ago he was passing a clump of bush on some vacant lots near his home when he saw a grouse busy feeding. Not long after, on going by the same spot, two grouse flew up, and then another, making three in all. Last Sunday evening around sunset, his steps led him past the same bush, where, much to his delight, there were four grouse "budding" in the birch trees.

They made no attempt to fly away and were not at all wild. The birds appeared to be in good shape and to be wintering well, in spite of the subzero weather, but it is known that the ruffed grouse protect themselves in the snow when weather is extremely cold, and the snow this winter has been suited to their needs. After having fed, the birds fly down from the trees, burrowing into the snow like rabbits, and staying under its mantle all night. If the weather is very cold, they stay in the snow the greater part of the day as well.

The same authority who saw these grouse says that the ruffed grouse is a bird that has a taste for sand, running water and warm corners in the bush, sheltered from the wind. The presence of grouse in a neighborhood may be determined by the fact whether or not they can be found in such spots. He added that there were certain places in the vicinity of Edmonton where he could always, at one time find ruffed grouse, and then they disappeared. Now he is glad to say they are coming back. The place where he found the four was one of those spots always favored by the birds, and the fact that they are coming back shows how quickly nature recovers if given a chance.

"I do hope," he said, "the boys will let them alone. It is the lads with the 22 rifles who are responsible for the disappearance of the birds. With his sudden flight the grouse is a target good enough for the best shots when he gets up, but, as you know, when on the ground or up a tree the bird is a fairly easy mark, and the boy gets his bird without a great deal of trouble."

It is the belief that these birds also suffer occasionally from ticks, which causes a depletion in numbers. Before the closed season was instituted birds suffering from some disease or pest of this kind were shot east of the city. In the United States considerable inquiry and experiments have been carried on to ascertain the origin of the trouble.

CHANGE IN ACT IS REQUESTED

Would Extend Time Limit for Heirs to Claim Estate

On urgent representations from all three sections of His Majesty's loyal opposition: Liberals, Conservatives and Laborites, Hon. J. F. Lymburn, attorney general, on Friday, in the legislature, agreed to extend the time limit outlined in amendments to the Ultimate Heir act providing that after the death of a person dying in Alberta without heir, the property goes to the University of Alberta, from one year to two. The clause provides that if property is not claimed by an heir within the stipulated time, it reverts to the university.

The discussion arose while the bill was in committee of the whole assembly.

Joseph T. Shaw, Liberal leader, submitted that even two years was too short a time for this provision and submitted there should be some provision for making the government responsible for continuing a search for an heir.

C. Y. Weaver, Conservative, said that many Central Europeans died in this country without leaving heirs, or without next of kin in this country and it was a difficult and expensive undertaking to locate an heir in the old land. Thus more than one year was desirable.

L. A. Giroux, Liberal, Grouard thought provision should be made for satisfactory proof on the part of the official guardian to the effect that no heir could be found.

C. Lionel Gibbs, Labor, Edmonton objected to the clause providing that should an heir ultimately be found all charges of the estate while in the University's hands, be charged against it.

M.L.A.'S MAKE MUCH PROGRESS

Speed Considered by Old-time Legislators to be a Record

During the first week of its sitting the third session of the sixth session of the legislature assembly made more progress than in any corresponding period of Alberta's history, according not only to the retentive memories of old stagers around the house, but also in the official record.

It will be recalled that the house met on Thursday, January 31. After the formal opening the house adjourned until the next day when the speech from the throne was formally moved and seconded and an adjournment moved until Monday.

Since last Monday then, in five days, the debate on the speech was disposed of; the budget introduced [illegible] and 23 government bills were introduced and received second reading of which 10 have passed through the committee of the whole assembly and stand ready for third reading.

This is a record for Alberta and is believed to be a record in Canada.

What is more and what has been a source of satisfaction to Premier J. E. Brownlee is that in all matters every member has had ample opportunity for full discussion on matters brought to the attention of the house.

The study group of the Dickens' Fellowship will meet in the juvenile department of the Public Library on Tuesday evening February 12 at 8:15, with E. L. Hill in charge. The book for study will be "The Mystery of Edwin Drood."

Auto Licenses Must Be Bought By 15th

Owners of motor vehicles in the city of Edmonton must secure their 1929 licenses and plates by February 15, according to Chief A. G. Shute, who stated Saturday that after that date he would prosecute anyone driving with a 1928 tag on his car.

Taxi drivers, too, will be watched and any operating without the necessary license, or proper plates, will also be prosecuted.

21 YEARS HAS "Y" BUILDING SERVED BOYS

Anniversary Celebrated by Flying of Organization Flag

Commemorating the twenty-first anniversary of the opening of its building, the Young Men's Christian Association of Edmonton flew its own Y.M.C.A. flag on Friday. The following account of the opening of the building in 1908 is interesting.

"The new building was formally opened on Wednesday, February 5, 1908. Addresses were delivered by His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Bulyea, J. A. McDougall, Esq., Mayor of Edmonton and president of the Association, Dr. D. G. McQueen, H. M. Tory, M.A., D.Sc., LL.D., president of the University of Alberta, D. A. Budge, general secretary of the Montreal Y.M.C.A., C. R. Sayer, travelling secretary of the Y.M.C.A. Western Division of Canada, and J. W. Ward."

Many and varied have been the experiences of the Association since that time. Happy days, many anxious ones and some almost fraught with disaster but through them all the Association has stood the test. The building valued at $60,000, stands as a splendid monument to the hard and strenuous work of many Edmonton citizens. Many changes have taken place in the board of governors and staff, but the ideals of the Association remain unchanged. Activities now being promoted are much more scientific and advanced with the needs of the present day, but the foundation for the work and the conviction of the men who founded the Association will never be altered.

The Association has made great strides during the past few years, now reaching a point where it has 970 members and nearly self-supporting. This wonderful accomplishment is largely due to the untiring efforts of president R. L. Sutherland and his board of directors. Members of the present board are: V. A. Porter, W. W. Prevey, M.L.A., Herbert Baker; T. A. Graham, J. A. Kinney, J. W. Bishop, M. L. Brown, C. R. Gillespie, L. Higgins, O. C. McIntyre, E. A. McBain, W. E. Simpson and G. E. H. Smith.

Fire Probe Shows No Incendiarism

Investigation into the fire in the old Blowey building on 101A avenue has disclosed the fact that spontaneous combustion of some sawdust was the cause of the blaze which caused $20,000 loss several days ago.

Inspector Dunnett of the Western Canada Fire Underwriters' Association together with Detective McDonald of the city police, conducted the investigation following the suggestion that it might have been started by an incendiary. Their investigations disposed of this theory, according to Chief of Police A. G. Shute.

STORES WOULD CLOSE EARLY QUERY SHOWS

Questionnaire Reveals Majority in Favor of 11 Months Half Holiday

"It is hardly possible for this association to take sides on the question of early closing," said A. T. Williamson, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association, who returned to Edmonton today following a brief visit to Calgary," the best thing we could do was to get an expression of opinion from our members, and for this purpose we used our machinery to send out a questionnaire."

Mr. Williamson added that he was sorry the merchants had not expressed themselves more fully, but out of 489 circulars sent out only 171 had been returned. After going over these returns it was discovered that 77 were in favor of closing eleven months of the year, 55 were satisfied to leave matters as at present, 12 would like to close on Saturdays, 20 wished to close on Wednesdays and keep open on Saturday nights, and 14 made various other suggestions. Included in the returns were six shoe retail men, who, said Mr. Williamson, could hardly be looked upon as retail merchants in the strict sense of the word. They wanted to close eleven months in the year.

Diverse Opinions

Further, to illustrate the diversity of opinion that exists, Mr. Williamson said that 28 tailors and clothiers made returns. Four wished to close for the eleven months, ten to remain as at present, four to close on Saturday afternoons, and eight to remain open on Saturday night.

As for the grocers, an important section of the merchants in regard to the matter of early closing, 59 returned their cards. Out of this total 32 were willing to close for the eleven months, 20 to remain as at present, six were indifferent, and one voted for closing on Saturday.

Referring to the trouble that had always occurred in connection with the definition of the various classes of storekeepers, owing to the fact that some were allowed to keep open by reason of the character of the goods they sold, Mr. Williamson said that in Calgary it was proposed to license grocers and confectioners, and the merchant would have to state explicitly what he intended to sell, and would be licensed for one or the other, so that there would be no overlapping. If a confectioner he would stay open, if a grocer he would be closed.

Drinks Moonshine, Dies Soon After

Taking a mixed drink of moonshine and wine, Mike Pylypiuk, store keeper at Innisfree, died 15 minutes later in a bunk house, Friday night, evidently by poisoning, according to word reaching "A" division of the Alberta provincial police. Corporal Naider and the coroner are investigating.

Pylypiuk went into the bunk house occupied by John Voloshyn after his evening meal and took a drink of the mixture and then rested on a bed. Fifteen minutes later others attempted to rouse him but found him dead.

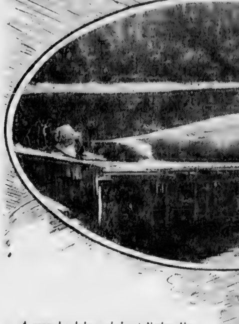
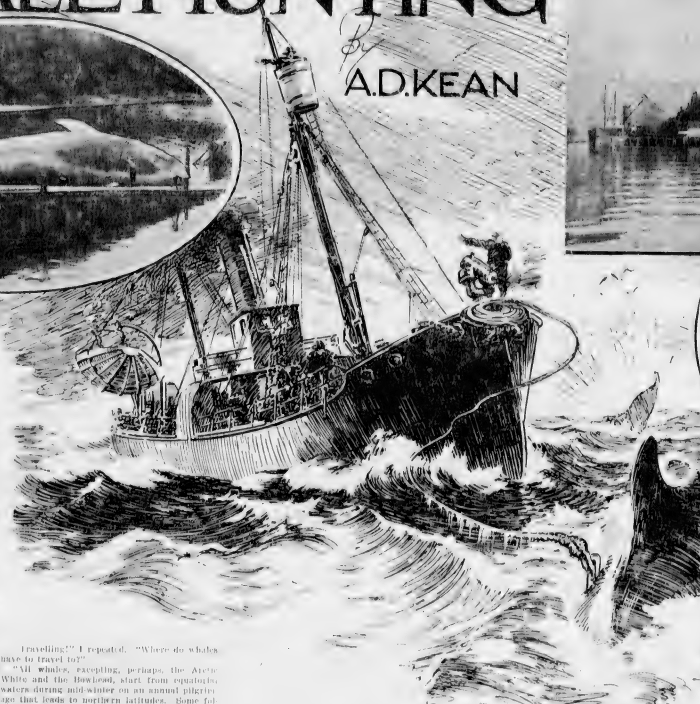
WHALE HUNTING

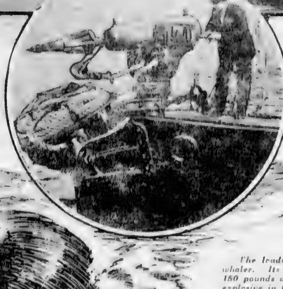
By A.D.KEAN



A record sulphur whale at Naden Harbor, Queen Charlotte Islands. Its length was 87 feet 6 inches and it weighed 120 tons.



The rope uncoiled behind the hurtling harpoon. The crackling impact followed by the muffled thump of an explosion told that the gunner's deadly aim had sent his missile home.



The loaded harpoon gun of a station whaler. Its four-pronged missile weigh 150 pounds and carries 14 ounces of high explosive in the hollow tip

The writer spent each summer during several seasons with the whalers of the north Pacific coast. A portion of that time was devoted to producing a complete motion picture record of "Whaling as an Industry", the films of which are owned by the Provincial Government of British Columbia.

Many voyages have thus enabled Mr. Keen to transcribe these remarkable experiences in faithful degree.

WE had reached the feeding waters whales.

All about us the sea was covered with a myriad of life. Acres upon acres of water fowl swam or dived and squawked over the glassy surface of the calm Pacific. The air was filled with loud flutterings and whistling noises from the feathered horde in sight. Cormorants, guillimots, puffins, parrot beaks, and a motley array of wild ducks floundered about, gorging themselves amid the feasting.

Far as the eye could reach the low-running ocean swells appeared discolored by streamers or red-toned lanes that led endlessly across the level expanse. A bucket thrown overside to obtain a sample was drawn up for the mate's inspection. Its contents were alive with wriggling animalculae.

"What are they?" I asked.

"Young shrimps," replied the mate. "Whale feed." And he held a fist full of the tiny creatures towards me.

And shrimps they were, indeed. The palm of the sailor's hand glittered to the flitting movement of the lively things, no larger than mosquitoes.

"Do whales live on stuff so small as that?"

"Sure. All the Gill-bone whales." And the mate smiled at me. "They can't get much else."

"Tell me how they manage it."

"Easy," came the reply. "The Gill whale's mouth is just a big trap. The lower jaw falls down, like a hinged cellar door, while he rushes along close to the surface, crowding his wide mouth full. Then he closes up and presses what he has caught against the gill bones, which hang down like curtains from the roof of his mouth, and squeezes out the water with his huge tongue. Then he swallows the several-hundred-pound mouthful, little at a time."

"Little at a time," did you say? "I thought a whale could swallow Jonah?"

"Huh! You couldn't poke a goose-egg down a gill-whale's throat with a baseball bat," exploded the mate. "Nature built that swallowing apparatus of his to withstand the pressure of twenty to one hundred tons of whale going against the solid sea at anywhere from a five to 20-knot gait. He has to pack his mouth full pretty fast, or he won't get even a swallow before it is washed out again.

"They travel in circles when they're feeding. Soon's one of 'em gets a mouth full he rolls along top o' the water, first on one side, then on the other, blowin' an' puffin' an' churnin' up a livery wake. They keep goin' round an' round a shoal of young shrimp, or herring maybe, for hours at a time. It's easy to hunt them then."

"I should think it very difficult to follow and harpoon them, when they go like that," said I, hoping the mate would go on.

"Oh, no!" he returned. "You see, the whale has regular breathing intervals, an' travels just about so far before he comes up to blow. He swims around one feedin' place at a time. Then we discover his circle—estimate his speed—and judge the point where he will, presumably, come up."

Through Myriads of Sea Life

"TOO much navigating for me," I added expectantly.

"Nothin 'to it," he countered. "Man in the barrel counts the spouts, an' takes the time between 'em. Gunner logs the ship's course an' speed, an' the direction the whale's goin'. You'll see pretty soon. We're on good grounds and should pick up a spout any minute."

We nosed along at a ten-knot clip, passing the turbulent feathered tribe, and the sargasso of sea food. Far astern the mountainous shore of Queen Charlotte Islands loomed in sombre relief. Our smoke-trail wound away from sight beyond the tide-swept ramparts of Heuston-Stewart channel, where nested the Rose Harbor station of the Consolidated Whaling Corporation Limited.

From the ship's bridge I watched the antics of a school of porpoises that raced and dived beneath the prow of the whaler "Black." So did not notice the near approach of our gunner and captain.

"Porpoise are good omen," he began crisply. "Always glad to meet up with them. Lively swimmers, aren't they?"

"Fastest things in the water I ever saw," I agreed. "Are they a sign of whales?"

"Not always," said the captain. "Often see porpoise without seeing whales. But seldom find whales without running into porpoise. Guess it's because the little devils locate the feeding grounds first. Bad day to hunt, though." And he gave the wheel a turn.

"Why?" I queried.

"Water too smooth. Whales mostly travel ing," came the brief reply.

"Travelling!" I repeated. "Where do whales have to travel to?"

"All whales, excepting, perhaps, the Arctic White and the Bowhead, start from equatorial waters during mid-winter on an annual pilgrimage that leads to northern latitudes. Some follow the Continental Shelf, which parallels the western coast of America, to feed and fatten upon shoals of young shrimp, herring, pilchard, and other sea life skirting the spawning beds and tidal shores."

Before such young stuff takes to deep water it assembles in masses, like you saw back there, and floats about just over the big drop where the ocean floor falls steeply towards mid Pacific. That's why we have to hunt whales out here."

Just then the lookout in the masthead barrel shouted down: "Three spouts. Southsou'west. About five miles."

The captain spun the wheel hard over, and brought the Black head up into the direction given. Two deck-hands climbed the port and starboard mainstays and gazed ahead. I could discover nothing but the glassy sea.

Whales Don't Spout Water

"HOW can he tell that?" I asked. "The whales are miles off, yet."

"He watches the leaders," the captain stated. "Sei whales are the smallest of the true, or whale-bone, species. They blow short and snappy and stay down from four to seven minutes. Then break water again and spout three—four—sometimes, five times. If the blows are in line and quite a distance apart—40 or 50 yards, or so—we know they are travelling. Ordinarily, they migrate in herds. An odd pair of Humpbacks or Finbacks occasionally accompany them. The Sei whales are hard to hunt and haven't much oil. Lots of 'em left in every sea."

Soon the vanguard of the school appeared. Groups of seven or eight strung out around us for a mile or more. I watched the sleek black bodies cleaving the water smoothly, as they coursed along. The short, hollow-sounding, vaporous puffs of their spoutings fascinated me.

"They don't spout water," I remarked.

"No," agreed the captain. "What you see is the warm breath of their bodies chilled by sudden contact with the cooler air at the water level. The whale's blow hole is a shallow cleft on top of the head. It contains maybe a quart of seawater when they first come up. The force of the blow passing through the hollow cavity sends up the spray you see—like a Chinaman at an old fashioned ironing board.' '

"Sounds like the snort of a wild horse,' I exclaimed, as a medium sized one came up and blew within a few feet of the starboard rail. I could almost have touched the thirty-foot monster.

It's broad, flat head cleared the level of the sea in long, undulating curves. One hazel-brown eye—big as a tea pot—seemed to take me in with calm and fearless gleam. The chunky, rounded body was propelled by measured easy-looking movements. And at a speed somewhat faster than the Black. At the fourth spout the Sei whale slid beneath the waves, leaving scarcely a ripple to mark its wake.

The Black plunged lazily over the heaving swells, with engines barely keeping way upon her. More than a hundred whales were in sight at one time. But the gunner showed no interest in their passing. I became impatient at the lack of action. Surely there was game enough. Why didn't the captain take a hand? What could he be waiting for?

Quietly the voice in the barrel called down: "Three Finbacks over the port quarter. One Humpback off starboard beam. He's beginning to feed."

Clang!—a signal from the bridge telegraph.

A moment's pause, then—Clang! And the ship, now pulsing with life, rushed full speed ahead. The mate put over the wheel, bringing the Black hard a'port.

We were heading for the Finback trio. The great whale chase was on!

Presently, I picked out the Finbacks. They travelled abreast, like chargers drawing a Roman chariot; plowing up a surging foam as they rushed across the seas. Their blows came almost in unison. Straight into the air, for a full ten feet, rose each feathery spray. Until even I could distinguish their difference from the shorter and more slender spoutings of the Sei whales. Once—twice—three times—they blew. At the fourth they sounded (dived).

"Make Ready For a Shot!"

"TIME!" called the gunner to the man at the taffrail log.

"Course?" he asked the mate by the wheel.

"South by west—a half west."

For the next few minutes no word was spoken. The gunner gazed fixedly into the distance. The lookout swept his sea glass over a narrow angle, as though his very life depended on the task in hand. We forged along at an alarming rate, bowing and dipping to the ocean's roll. The tenseness of the moment lay hold of me. I tingled with excitement and gripped the bridge-rail to steady myself.

Still the gunner glued his glance to the watch in his hand. I heard the mate shifting, slightly, against the dip of the deck, his full attention focused on the compass dial. Suddenly I caught a glint of high-tossed spray.

"Blow!" came the cry from the masthead. "Sta'bard bow—one mile—head on."

"Sta'bard—hard over!" And the gunner grabbed the handle of the telegraph.

One bell—then two, in quick succession. Then one again. And the Black lost way. She began to wallow in the trough of the sea.

The finbacks came on like grayhounds. We lay almost directly in their path. They were meeting us!

"Twelve minutes to go," says the gunner as the three whales sounded. "They're movin' fast. Make ready for a shot!"

The mate read off the compass, gave over the wheel and left the bridge. The gunner made a rapid move or two at the telegraph and passed brief orders to the deck hands, as they showed up forward.

A helper unlimbered the gun-swivel and pulled open the priming pan on the breach. The mate stepped up, primed the loaded barrel and set the percussion cap on the firing nipple. Then all stood clear; waiting.

I turned to the oncoming finbacks. They spouted in apparent unconcern, advancing at considerable distance. I saw them rushing towards the Black amid three glistening, foam-flecked streaks, shearing the water with graceful speed. The sight sent my pulses throbbing.

"All down!" voiced the man in the barrel, as the finbacks sounded in an oily swirl.

The mate climbed on to the bridge and took the wheel again. With one last glance at the compass the gunner pocketed his watch and silently left the deck. He came in sight quickly beside the harpoon gun. I watched him release the trigger pin, and point the heavy weapon downward over the bow.

The next few moments seemed an eternity to me. The rolling motions of the Black became sickening. No human sound could be heard. Only the dull clinck clanck of the Penberthy injector on the boiler-pump broke the death like silence. The sea remained in a placid calm. The gunner crouched at his post. With hand up raised, he listened to a voice that murmured words I could not catch. Then, suddenly, he braced himself.

Hauling the Boat Like a Toy

GREAT sons of Neptune! What was that?

A sound like a locomotive exhaust came up from right under the boat. A roaring rush filled the air.

"Sharp! Ahead!" Shouted down from above.

The gunner swung his weapon down and fired!

A jet of flying spray!

A billow of blackened smoke!

One shattering report that fairly jerked me off my feet, and I saw the high-flung rope uncoiling itself behind the hurtling harpoon. The crackling impact, followed by the muffled thump of an explosion, told that the gunner's deadly aim had sent his missile home.

The finback struck the sea with his giant flukes (tail), sending up a splash that drenched us all. Then, straight down the stricken monster dived. First the foregore (first sixty fathoms of three-inch manilla line behind the harpoon) and, next, the main line whined over the guides and on through the round-flanged bow ports, to sink in the blue green depths.

Smoke wreaths curled from the whirling drums and over the hardwood brake locks. Buckets of sea water were dipped and doused upon them.

The finback came up for air about two hundred fathoms to windward. I could feel each surging struggle as the sagging line drew taut. The whale now settled into a steady haul. He headed through the oncoming swells, towing the fifty ton vessel as though it were only a toy.

"He's well hit," says the gunner. "Harpoon's stickin' out just back of his fin. See it when he blows again."

"Gosh!" I exclaimed. "The six-foot shank is almost buried."

"We'll let him run a while. Then winch up close for a heart shot," says the gunner in the most casual and unperturbed manner. As if tying his eighty-foot ship on to such a diving, plunging, hundred tons of dynamic strength was nothing at all to worry about.

And neither it was to him and his active crew. This whole affair was but a part of their daily life, and only what they expected. To my mind, though, it seemed the acme of high adventure. To catch a fish as long as the boat you are riding on, and be towed for hours together—towards heaven knows where—at a speed and by a power which appears beyond control; that's fishin' with vengeance, indeed.

However, I noticed the gunner kept his weather eye peeled and ordered the mate to haul in the line at each weakening lunge the finback made. When the whale could no longer stay down for more than a few moments, he began to spout short, wheezing puffs. The wide-spread prongs of the hundred and fifty pound harpoon tugged at his vitals. A water-logged line dragged heavily and threatened to overwhelm the once powerful body. Then the steam winches got busy and drew us close to our game.

The mammoth carcass shone darkly in the afternoon sun. It lolled about, helpless to each motion of the lazy swells. Every few seconds blood clotted spouts dribbled downward from the side of the broad flat head. Only the flippers (side fins) and tail flukes weaved slowly to keep the inert mass from sinking.

"Pram overside," commanded the gunner.

(The pram is an odd shaped craft that has been used by whalers for centuries in the business of hand-killing whales. The frail-looking structure is about eighteen feet long and beamy. Its round-bottomed bow converges into a narrow, outreaching front that allows the boat to slide on to the back of a partly submerged whale. The pram can then be swiftly spun around, away from danger.)

The nose of our pram was quickly driven on to the slippery top of the finback. A well directed thrust guided the steel-tipped lance. The sailor who held it swung high and clear, like a pole vaulter, driving the implement full to its mark by his weight. With a backward leap he cleared the swirling vortex of the finback's struggles, to be pulled aboard the pram again.

And Next Comes a Humpback

THE Black nosed up to the vanquished whale and made it fast in the bow-chains. While deck hands cut off the tips of the flukes the mate inserted the sleeved end of a steam pipe into the body cavity. A hose was then attached from the boiler room and the whale infla with steam. This caused the big body to tu stomach side up and float high in the wat

Next, a [illegible] lamp lantern and the comp flag were all made fast to a fifteen-foot pole, wh was firmly embedded in the upper part of finback. The seventy-foot catch was then c adrift, while the Black put about and left scene.

"Where to, now?" I questioned the mate.

He turned from writing up the log and sa "We've got to hurry. Humpback's still feed Captain's goin' after him too."

Now the humpback was a different prop tion entirely. His breathing interval irregular, on account of his feeding. Blows ca at any time within five to ten minute peri His course, too, was most erratic; ranging circles that varied from half a mile to two m in diameter, according to the giant's whim any rate, the humpback gave both the gun and the mate no end of trouble in trying to tr his spouts and estimate the artful dodger's ne appearance. Again and again we missed but scant few yards.

To strike accurately a whale must be with fifty yards of the gun, and inside an angle not more than sixty degrees ahead of the shi course. It requires considerable manoeuvri and the utmost caution to approach any of t Gill whale family. And this wise old humpba seemed to divine our purpose with uncan success.

First the ripping sound of his fetid spo would echo over the starboard side. Again, would come up full abeam, or perhaps be spouting abaft of our rudder post and sound the second [illegible] with the platform. But [illegible] went of how [illegible] ways waited [illegible] humpback to wind [illegible] dive. [illegible] and take up [illegible]

We persist[illegible] the ship's cours marked down the time between blows and tri off the curves [illegible] sounding. Several tim getting so near [illegible] not daring to speak [illegible] of arousing the wily evader's alarm.

An outstanding feature of the humpba whale is his enormous side flippers. Those a full grown adult measure twelve to fifte feet in length by four to six feet across the wi est parts. They enable him to turn and twi at acute angles and, also, to project the hu body directly downward when it first leaves th surface. In fact, the sounding—or act of divin—of the humpback whale is always spectacula

As the great creatures disappear they rou themselves into curving, bow-like humps an literally stand on their heads. The last part be seen is the wide-spread, twenty foot tail u raised in darkened silhouette as they pull them selves below. At last, I became so used to seei the broad, long flippers pulling the thick bo along, barely outside the ring of the harpoon range, that I gave up all hope for the renegade capture. Then we hit the combination

The gunner stood waiting.

Within ninety feet of the Black's nose th humpback's spout broke through. There cam a blinding flash and a tremendous report. heard a yell from the mast head just as a might wave swept the whole of the foredeck unde Ropes, rigging and gun crew were carried a by the force of it.

The humpback heaved the latter half of hi gruesome body twenty feet, or more, straight u His giant flukes poised a second in mid air, the smashed the sea like a thunderclap. In a mae strom of bloody foam the monster sank fro sight.

By the time the humpback showed up agai the gunner returned to the bridge, so I asked "What about the pram?"

"No pram for humps," he replied. "To risky. Side flippers would smash the boat an kill the crew before Davy Jones could shake hi locker.

The humpback towed us miles to windwar before giving up the struggle. It was but matter of hanging on to him, and not gettin close enough to snap a shortened line. And th sag in the two thousand feet that we playe him with prevented this. The four-inch rop rode the crests and fell with the trough of th sea, gradually overburdening the wounded whale Well within the hour we drew alongside for merciful shot from the bomb lance.

Then we proceeded to pick up the flag-marke finback. And later, with both whales secure, la our course for Rose Harbour and settled dow to the all-night grind of a ninety-mile haul

WOMAN BARRISTER IN MURDER TRIAL

Suggestion Accused Was Trapped Into Making Statement

For the first time in England a woman barrister led the defence in a murder trial recently.

VICAR HAS WAITED FIFTEEN YEARS FOR CHURCH BUILDING

Construction Was Stopped by War After Prince Laid Stone

ROYAL CONTRIBUTION

Huge Sum to be Raised in Small Subscriptions Among Artisans

For 15 years the Rev. R. H. Hutchinson, of St. Anselm's Vicarage, Kennington, has been waiting for his church to be built.

The foundation stone was laid in 1914 by the Prince of Wales, the prospective church being in the area of the Duchy of Cornwall property, and plans were passed and 10ft. of wall had been reached when the war stopped the scheme.

Today the hope that [illegible] scattered by the war lies behind huge hoardings, and still Mr. Hutchinson has no real church, his clearage being the top part of the mission premises.

His parish consists of about 10,000 persons in an area cut out of St. Mary-the-Less, and it was one of King Edward's first [illegible] to visit the mission in 1901 on the appointment of Mr. Hutchinson. In 1905 King George gave him £1,000 towards the purchase of the site, and the Duchy architect prepared plans for the church, which was to cost about £8,000.

WHAT CAUSED TWIN BROTHER CANCER EXPERTS TO SUICIDE?

Tragedy of Two Distinguished Medical Men Puzzles Famous Surgeon They Had Aided in Difficult Operations—Belief "Automatic Twins" Minds Became Unhinged Days Before

Problems well known to psychologists [illegible] Dr. Arthur Brown [illegible] and Dr. [illegible] Macbeath [illegible] of Harley street to take their [illegible]

[illegible]

They assisted a distinguished London surgeon to carry out a difficult operation at St. Paul's Hospital, Endell street. Twenty-four hours later they were found dead in their flat in St. James's Place, W.

Does the fact that they were "automatic twins"—that is, alike in mind and thought and prompted by identical impulses—hold the key to their tragic deaths?

DOCTOR'S BELIEF.

A doctor with a large West-end practice, who was a personal friend of the dead brothers, said: "I can think of no other explanation. I have known them for some time, as intimately, I suppose, as any other doctor in London. They had, in effect, the same mind.

"It may have been that, attracted by the glamor of Harley street, they had mortgaged their [illegible] to acquire an ample stock of radium at their disposal and then, [illegible] a quick return on their capital, they decided to end their [illegible]

"This may be the correct [illegible] think the explanation lies deeper."

With a splendid [illegible] the brothers had placed [illegible] of radium, valued at £2,000, purchased before coming to London, at the disposal of the authorities at St. Paul's Hospital, Endell street, W.C.

With a famous surgeon they went to the hospital. The operation and application of radium accomplished they were offered the customary fees, but these they refused. They preferred, they said, to continue to act in a purely honorary capacity, and arrangements were at once made for them to carry out further work at the hospital.

HELPED HOSPITAL.

"We were delighted," a member of the hospital staff said, "to have secured the services and the promise of the use of their radium. [illegible] opened up a new vista for us. With the radium we could have done so much, for here we have to rely upon what we can borrow from other hospitals."

Most of the hospital staff were meeting the brothers for the first time, and were deeply impressed by their efficiency and good fellowship.

Before leaving, they were conducted over the building. Their last act was to visit the hospital laboratory. There they met the doctor in charge of the cancer work at the hospital and [illegible] with him with enthusiasm what they hoped to be able to accomplish.

When the brothers arrived in London they rented a consulting room in Harley street in order to practise as radiologists. Impressed with their training at Paris, Stockholm and Brussels, the editor of a medical journal gave them an introduction to a well known London doctor, and soon the two brothers began to acquire a number of friends in their profession.

They rented a flat in St. James's Place, ran a car and gave no hint that they were in any way financially embarrassed.

They were never to be seen apart. They worked together, assisted each other always at operations, and always consulted patients together.

WHAT IMPULSES.

"I cannot even imagine what led to their dreadful resolution, said the surgeon. [illegible] They left St. Paul's Hospital at 5.45 on the Monday evening, eagerly discussing future plans and arrangements. I am certain that the idea of death was not present in either of their minds. They were looking forward, [illegible] told me, to a visit from the great [illegible] and they had a definite appointment with me for the Wednesday afternoon.

"All that I know is that the husband of the patient who was to be operated on the next day called them up in the morning and could get over the telephone nothing but disturbing and inexplicable incoherencies. What had happened was that on their way [illegible]

Soon after [illegible]

A [illegible] It was written on a foolscap sheet of paper and was to the following effect.

"We have given our lives to the study of cancer research. We have reduced ourselves to a state of poverty. Life is not worth living."

The two doctors were the central figures of a strange scene in a London specialist's house two days before they ended their lives.

They had been invited to a party given by the specialist and his wife. Invitations were issued to about fifty doctors, and the guests included some of the most famous medical men, surgeons, pathologists, alienists, and bacteriologists, in London.

The host was surprised when the twin brothers arrived at the house some considerable time before the party was due to begin. It was apparent to him and his wife that they were in a very distressed state of mind.

HOST ASTONISHED.

On entering the drawing-room they asked [illegible] "Are you going [illegible]" The host was [illegible]

The brothers then said they wanted to confer in private on an important matter. They went into a corner of the room and for some minutes carried on a whispered conversation. Then apparently in order to secure absolute privacy for their discussions, they asked permission of their host to confer in another room.

Still astonished by their strange behaviour, and wondering what the purport of it could be, the host readily gave permission to the young specialists to go into another room. They remained in this room for some minutes and then returned to the drawing-room, where the host was awaiting their return. One of the brothers then said it was necessary to use the telephone. They were both conducted to the telephone cabinet.

They carried on a conversation through the mouthpiece of the telephone for a few minutes, returned to the drawing-room once more and then said that they would have to speak on the telephone once more.

They went back to the telephone, but whether they actually rang up anybody or merely spoke at random to some [illegible]

"POLITICAL RESULTS."

One of the brothers then went up to the host and said that a treatise which he and his brother had recently published in a medical journal had produced very curious political results.

"Oh, nonsense," said the astonished host to his guests.

There was an awkward silence while the two brothers stared searchingly into the bewildered face of their host. One of them then went and stood alone in a corner of the room.

His brother, after standing silently in the centre of the room, turned to his host and said, "I must consult my brother on this matter."

The brothers [illegible] another of their corner conferences, and then, returning to their host, said, "The article [illegible] results upon our careers, but we are not at liberty to say anything about it. Might we slip away quietly?"

The host by this time realised that the minds of the two young specialists had become unhinged.

They said "Good night" to their host and hurriedly made preparations to leave.

Just before they reached the door their host made a last effort to pierce the mystery of their strange conduct [illegible] The brothers [illegible] without taking farewell of their hostess.

COMPANY DIRECTOR DISAPPEARS ON EVE OF INVESTIGATION

Stock Value Drops Heavily When Exchange Says Accounts Unreliable

LUGGAGE PACKED

Long Journey Was Postponed but Man and Wife Vanished

The directors of Ner-Sag, Ltd., have instituted a widespread search for Charles A. Brandreth, the late chairman of the company, whose disappearance caused a great City sensation when it became known.

The disappearance of Mr. Brandreth and his wife, who were both directors of Ner-Sag, Ltd., was announced in an official statement by the directors of the company which was posted in the Stock Exchange.

This statement says:

"The accounts at September 30, 1928, as signed by Mr. and Mrs. Brandreth and submitted to the shareholders, cannot be relied upon."

The £1 shares of the company, which soared to over £9 last October, were 42s. 6d. at the close on the market on the day prior to the statement and 25s after the company's statement. The 5s. shares of the Ner-Sag Overseas Company fell from 6s. 6d. to 2s. 9d.

Every possible endeavour was made to trace the whereabouts of Mr. and Mrs. Brandeth before the recently reconstructed board of directors took the remarkable step of posting in the Stock Exchange the announcement regarding an investigation of the finances of the company.

It had been proposed by the board, of which Mr. Brandreth was chairman, that a final dividend of 50 per cent, in addition to the interim dividend of 10 per cent. already distributed, should be paid for the year.

After the criticisms in one paper in London, all the rest commenting favorably on the company's balance sheet, Sir John H. Biles, the naval architect, who is one of the shareholders, and H. Hackett, of the firm of chartered accountants who have carried out the investigation into the affairs of the company, were elected to the board, and Mr. Brandreth then resigned the chairmanship in favor of Sir John Biles.

The accountants at one time were working day and night to complete their report. When they had [illegible] communication with Mr. Brandreth to obtain from him information on certain points.

TIME FOR A STATEMENT

Mr. Brandreth was at the London office of the company on the Wednesday before it had been arranged for him to be present at a board meeting on the Friday to answer the questionnaire which had been prepared by the accountants. He had explained before that he would require a little time to prepare his statement.

After that all trace of him and his wife was lost, and a message reached the board on Friday that he had been "detained."

Until two or three months ago Mr. and Mrs. Brandreth lived at a house at Basildon, near Pitsea, Essex. They sold this property, and it was understood that they were negotiating for the purchase of a house in London. In the meantime they lived at the Valley Hotel, Caterham.

Mr. Harper, caretaker at Sunnyhill, the house at Basildon, said:

"I last saw Mr. Brandreth a few days after Christmas. He and Mrs. Brandreth packed a large portmanteau, and said they might be leaving the place for good very soon. They told me to burn any old papers and rubbish left behind them and keep the place tidy.

"Most of their personal luggage was packed before Christmas, and it was labelled in preparation for a business trip which Mr. Brandreth told me he was making to Bombay in a ship which sailed on December 21. Some time before the sailing date, however, Mr. Brandreth said that a meeting of Ner-Sag Ltd., which was to have been held on December 14 had been postponed, and that he would not be able to go to Bombay."

MOTHER MYSTIFIED

No one is more mystified by the disappearance of Mr. and Mrs. Brandreth than Mrs. George Edwin Searle, the aged mother of Mrs. Brandreth, who lives in a small bungalow at Minster.

"The first intimation I had of their disappearance was from the newspapers. I know that my son-in-law is in poor health, but I can only think that the mystery will be cleared up.

"I have not yet heard a word from my daughter or her husband, but I am confident that they will not leave me in suspense, and that they will communicate with me before long."

When Brandreth purchased Shurland Castle in 1927 for £3,800 he realised an old ambition. Before the war he was a mechanic at Short's Airplane Works, then at Eastchurch. He saw the castle and declared that if ever he had the money he would buy it.

Brandreth until nearly a year ago held more than 43,000 £1 shares in Ner-Sag Ltd. His present holding is stated to be 290 shares. The majority disposed of were transferred during March and April last year, when the market price stood round £5 a share.

MANY FAIL IN BAR EXAMINATION

A painful surprise for law students is contained in the examination results published recently.

Probably for the first time in the history of these examinations no student has succeeded in obtaining first-class honors in any of three subjects Constitutional Law, Criminal Law or Hindu and Mohammedan Law.

Of the 213 students who sat for the Constitutional Law examination, 81 failed. Of the 168 who sat for the final examination, 62 failed and only three obtained first-class honors.

A number of special prizes offered by different Inns have not been awarded.

In the past, being called to the Bar was largely a matter of eating dinners, but since the war a stiffening of the examinations began and has continued.

One of the students who obtained a place in Class II at the final examination is Miss M. W. Prothero, daughter of Chief-Inspector Prothero, of Scotland Yard. Viscount Clive was also in Class II.

Inventor of Rocket Apparatus for Life Saving at Sea Dead

William Schermuly, who went to sea in his early days in "wind-jammers," and later devoted his life to saving life at sea, has died at Sutton, Surrey, aged 72.

It was more than 40 years ago that Mr. Schermuly patented his first invention for life saving. He afterwards turned his attention to rocket apparatus, and the Schermuly pistol rocket apparatus, which was patented in 1921, is now in use in all parts of the world. It was used a few weeks ago in saving 11 lives, when a Dutch trawler was in difficulty off Lowestoft.

ENGLISH VILLAGERS BEING TERRORISED

Anonymous Letters Showered by Unseen Hands on Inhabitants

RAIN OF STONES

Even Victims of Physical Assault Have No Clue to Mystery

Strange methods of delivery have been adopted by the writer of anonymous abusive letters which for some time past have been reaching residents of Wollaston, a village near Wellingborough. Letters have been sent by post; delivered by hand, through letter-boxes; hidden in flower boxes; thrown in cigarette tins from the tops of omnibuses; tied to pebbles and flung into gardens, and left in front gardens and flower pots.

Recently a resident found footprints in the snow outside his back door and discovered one of the letters pinned to the door.

On one occasion several victims kept watch in their back gardens until 3 a.m. During the whole of the time stones flung by unseen hands fell among them, and at dawn a letter was found bearing the words "Wasn't it cold last night?"

Most of the letters are written in block capitals.

The campaign has not stopped short at letters. One of the principal victims was cut below the eye by a stone when walking in a dark street. Others have also been the target of showers of stone, and one was hit on the head by an empty beer bottle while sitting in an outhouse.

Police traps have been unsuccessful and there is not the smallest clue to the mystery. The villagers are becoming terrorized.

SIR JOHN BRUNNER IS DEAD IN LONDON

Industrial Leader Had Been Member of British Parliament

Sir John Brunner died in London recently aged sixty-three.

He became ill after the by-election at Cheltenham last September, in which he stood as Liberal candidate, and was defeated by Sir Walter R. Preston, the Conservative.

Sir John Fowler Brunner was the second baronet. He had represented the Southport, Northwich, and Leigh Divisions in Parliament, but he was far more of a business figure than a political one in the public eye.

He was a leader in the industrial world, and, according to the "Directory of Directors," was on the boards of 10 companies, including the Brunner Investment Trust, Ltd., of which he was chairman. He was a member of the council of the Federation of British Industries.

Considerable surprise was caused in the city in October 1927 by his resignation from the board of Imperial Chemical Industries, whose chairman is Lord Melchett, then Sir Alfred Mond. The combine resulted from the fusion of Brunner, Mond and Company, Nobel Industries, United Alkali Company, and British Dyestuffs Corporation, and has an authorized capital of £65,000,000.

Sir John's father, Sir Tomlinson Brunner, was the joint founder with Ludwig Mond, of Brunner, Mond and Company.

The heir to the baronetcy, Lieutenant Felix John Morgan Brunner, R.F.A., married the daughter of the late Mr. H. B. Irving, the actor, three years ago. He is thirty-two.

SEEK TENANTS FOR WARWICK CASTLE

Warwick Castle, which, since Saxon times, has been so intimately connected with England's history, is to be let, and it is understood the Countess of Warwick has instructed a firm to find a tenant.

The castle, which is situated on a cliff overlooking the River Avon, forms one of England's most impressive piles. In addition to a fine baronial hall, there are numerous reception rooms, private chapel and an armoury.

There is an Elizabethan hunting lodge in the woods, and the sole right to the use of one and a half miles of river and sporting rights over some 1000 acres.

MARRIED MAN TOLD PRESS STORY THAT SURPRISED HIS WIFE

Photograph With "Fiancee" Started Action Against Newspaper

DAMAGES AWARDED

Wife Says Position Injur by Publication in Press

The publication of a photograph of a couple "whose engagements had been announced," according to an accompanying paragraph in a newspaper, was the subject of a libel action before Mr. Justice McCardie and a common jury in the King's Bench Division. Mrs. Mildred Anna Cassidy, of Alexander street, Bayswater, sued the Daily Mirror Newspapers, Ltd., for damages. It was denied, for the defence, that the publication was libellous. The jury awarded Mrs. Cassidy £500 damages with costs but granted a stay of execution.

J. B. Melville, K.C., for Mrs. Cassidy, said she was the wife of Mr. Kettering Edward Cassidy, a racehorse owner, who was also known as Michael Corrigan. Her husband left her in 1921, and some time later agreed to make her an allowance. She had started divorce proceedings against him.

There appeared in the Daily Mirror on February 28 last year a photograph of her husband with another woman with the words, "Mr. M. Corrigan the racehorse owner, and Miss Muriel Harrold, whose engagement has been announced."

HUSBAND'S ACT.

"It appeared," Mr. Melville said, "that Mrs. Cassidy's husband had perpetrated this outrage on his wife by publicly announcing that he and the woman in the photograph had been engaged.

"The photograph was taken by a Press representative at Hurst Park and the husband, it was alleged, informed the photographer that he and Miss Harrold were engaged."

Mrs. Cassidy said she was seventeen when she married her husband in 1916. He now allowed her £52 a quarter.

Martin O'Connor (her counsel). Is your husband a man who appears to have become wealthy in recent years?—Yes, he lives like a man with plenty of money.

Did you know that he owned racehorses?—Yes.

"After the publication of the photograph," she said, "people who had seen the photograph were [illegible] frosty."

Mrs. Cassidy added that she filed her petition for divorce in June, and it was still pending.

Mr. Conway, K.C., cross-examining, said, "Undoubtedly your husband has treated you disgracefully, and the Daily Mirror sympathize with you in that."

Mrs. Cassidy: They have not shown much sympathy.

Mr. Conway: Your husband cut a big figure in Ostend? Did you know that horses were run in the name of Mrs. Constance Olive Corrigan, who was the woman with whom he was living?—I did not know that.

SENT TO PRISON

"Did you know that his career in Belgium was cut short because of his being convicted and sent to prison for using a false name on a passport?—I learned that later.

In 1926 you were satisfied that you had the misfortune to marry a scamp?—Yes.

Mr. Conway: Why did you want to claim acquaintance with your husband when you knew that he was a scamp?—Because he is my husband.

Mrs. Cassidy added that the photograph had been published in two other newspapers, and actions which she brought against them had been settled for £37 10s. with £50 costs in one case and £40 in the other.

Mr. Conway: Do you know that your husband has promised to marry some one other than the woman in the Daily Mirror photograph? I ask you because there is in the list of common jury actions one brought by Miss Webb against Mr. Cassidy for breach of promise.

Mrs. Cassidy said that she had been informed of the action, but did not know who the woman was.

Mr. Conway submitted that there was no case to go to the jury as in the circumstances the words complained of were not capable of bearing the defamatory meaning which was alleged.

MERCHANT LEAVES MONEY TO POOR

By the terms of the will of John MacGregor, a native of Glasgow, who spent most of his life in Rangoon, the poor of Glasgow are expected to benefit to the extent of £120,000.

Mr. MacGregor provided that the residue of his estate, following upon the death of his widow, should be divided equally between the poor of Glasgow and of Rangoon.

The last audit of the estate showed a book value of £299,000, but the market value is now estimated at £240,000.

Mr. MacGregor stipulated expressly in his will that the money should not be given to any religious bodies or societies, but be entrusted for distribution to the Glasgow magistrates and the Rangoon Municipality.

Farmer's Stag-Hunting Ban In Somerset Raises Storm

Farmers in Somerset are resenting the attack on Henry Nation, the farmer who recently banned hunting over his farms, which was made at the Minehead fat stock show dinner by Fred Beadle, a prominent supporter of the Devon and Somerset Staghounds.

Mr. Beadle referred to Mr. Nation's action as an "empty gesture" made for the press. It was simply a newspaper stunt, he said, and he suggested that Mr. Nation had been well paid by cranks for what he had done and written. Mr. Beadle further contended that to attack stag-hunting was a money making game, and that where there were wealthy cranks "there [illegible] of prey" appeared ready to attack sport. There would always be this water-drinking, biscuit nibbling, ragged-coated fraternity, never losing any chance to kill sport or pleasure. "These people," he urged, "had captured the R.S.P.C.A. and [illegible] that society's fund for the suppression of sport; they had hustled those who held responsible positions in the society into obscurity. It was further suggested the press were paid to attack blood sports.

Giving his opinion on Mr. Beadle's outburst, one leading Somerset farmer said to me. "Somerset farmers greatly respect Mr. Nation and admire his courage. Mr. Beadle's quite uncalled-for remarks savour of the usual arrogance displayed by Exmoor staghunters in their behaviour. Apparently they think Mr. Nation has no right to please himself about his land."

Another prominent farmer said: "It is all bunkum to say hunting helps farmers. They never help us without helping themselves twice as much. People like Mr. Beadle fail to realise that farmers will no longer tolerate the destruction of their crops for [illegible] pleasure."

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE

The Twins Go Into Business

"I GUESS it wasn't such a good idea, after all," mourned Dick, looking around the boathouse that he and his twin sister had fitted up as a locker room for the boys and girls who used Long River for skating.

"The idea is all right," replied Dorothy. "But I think the boathouse is too far away from where the people want to skate."

"It is on the wrong side of the river, I'll admit," agreed Dick. "But the ice is just as good over here. I'll bet if they knew what we had ready for them in this old place, they'd come all right."

"Well, we advertised," reminded Dorothy. "But I guess people won't get out of the habit of skating where they want to skate just because we have opened up a boathouse."

"If they would only come near enough to see the sign!"

There were plenty of skaters on Long River that afternoon, but as Dorothy had pointed out and as both of the twins could see, they were all skating close to the opposite side. So far, only one man had seen the new sign "SKATER'S CLUB AND PAVILION," that had been put up over the door, and he was a man who had watched them move everything in the week before. So as far as business was concerned, he didn't count.

The twins stood in the doorway watching the great crowd of skaters as it moved up and down the river. Suddenly they noticed a small group dart away from the others and race toward the creek that led to the sawmill. Somebody had fallen in! There was a moment of excitement. The twins could see that they were pulling somebody out of the water; then they saw two men coming across the ice to where they were standing. These men were dragging a sled behind them, while on the sled was a bundle, wrapped in an overcoat.

"Whoever it is," cried Dick, "They're bringing him here. Quick, Dorothy, put a couple more pieces of wood on the fire, while I fix the cot and get out the blankets."

The twins hustled to get the boathouse ready for its first customer, and by the time the men had reached the spot, the cot was ready and the blankets were being warmed by the fire.

"It is a little girl," explained one of the rescuers. "She fell through the thin ice into the sawmill creek. We saw smoke coming out of your chimney and thought that this would be the best place to bring her."

They brought her in, dried her with one blanket and wrapped the other around her. She hadn't swallowed much water, but she was so cold that she was shivering. They dried her clothes by the fire, and while they were drying, Dick opened the faucet on the coffee percolater and filled up a cup for the girl, who by this time was feeling very much better.

Then one of the men said that he would see that she got home safely.

"I guess she would have died if you hadn't had everything right here the way you did," he said. "By the way, what is this place, anyway?"

"It's a club room for skaters,"

"Whoever It Is," Cried Dick. "They're Bringing Him Here"

replied Dick. "We've just opened it up, and we're trying to get people to skate on this side of the river. The ice is just as good."

"It's better. Over on the other side there are bad spots that don't freeze over properly, and people are always falling in. I'm coming back here after I take this little girl home, and I have some friends who would like to come too."

"Bring them along," invited Dorothy. "The more the merrier."

"By the way," spoke up the second man. "Do you sell that coffee?"

"Yes sir."

"I'll take a cup. What else have you got?"

"Hot dogs, sandwiches and pie."

"Give me a hot dog. Wait a minute."

He opened the door and shouted to some other people who were gathered in a group talking about the accident.

"It's not private," he called. "Come on in. It's a rest room. Hot coffee, sandwiches and everything."

"Oh, boy!" said one, as they all entered the boathouse. "And they've got a stove, too. This is great!"

"And are these lockers?" asked another.

"Yes sir," answered Dick, looking up from the counter where he was tending to the "hot dogs." "You can leave your shoes here while you are skating and leave your skates here when you go home. We keep them clean for you and sharpen them once a week or whenever they need it."

"How much does a fellow have to pay for all this?"

"Fifty cents a season."

"It's worth it. Do you know," he continued, warmly, "Whoever thought of this had a mighty good idea!"

Dick looked at Dorothy and Dorothy looked back at Dick. Neither of the two said anything; but as Dick dropped the first dime into the box they were using as a till, he figured that maybe the fellow who made the last remark was right.

A Brave Girl

WHEN February comes around and we think of historic figures we usually think at the same time of events connected with them, and the Revolutionary War and its several battles is now very prominently in our minds. There is one incident of the War that comes to mind just now, and that is the siege of Fort Henry. Fort Henry was the stronghold or safety post of Wheeling, then a little village on the banks of the Ohio River. This was new country then and the Indians felt bitter hatred of the white men who were pushing farther and farther west. The strife between the Indian and the white men was such that whenever the white men saw the Indians approaching they and all their families sought refuge behind the strong walls of the fort.

This enmity had continued for many years until 1777, when the Indians saw a chance to vanquish their foe by joining forces with the British, who were at that time engaged in trying to subdue rebellious colonists. So it was that a party of Indians attacked Fort Henry. All the whites hurried into the fort and barred the gates. The fight was a hot one. The whites fired through the logs upon the Indians. Then the head men sent out fourteen men to drive the Indians away, but the Indians so far outnumbered the whites that nearly all were killed. Then another relay left the fort and met the same fate. By this time there were but twelve men left in the fort and the powder was nearly all gone. In a house a little distance away was a keg of powder. The question was, how to bring it into the fort. But who would go for it?

Any one leaving the fort would be a sure target for the Indians. Two or three young men offered to go. The leader said: "We can only spare one of you. Settle it among yourselves which one it shall be." Then out stepped that brave girl, Elizabeth Zane. "Let me go for the powder," she said. But the people said no, such a dangerous mission was not for a young girl to undertake. Her friends begged her not to think of leaving the fort, but Elizabeth had made up her mind and she was not to be dissuaded. "We cannot spare one man," she insisted. "I am only a girl and I will not be missed." At last she had her own way. The gate of the fort was opened a little way and the girl ran out. The Indians saw her but they did not shoot. Perhaps they did not think it worth while to waste a shot on a girl. She reached the house, poured the powder into her apron and started to run back to the fort.

All of a sudden the Indians seemed to realize what she was about. They gave a wild cry and fired their guns at her. They missed. Faster and faster she ran and got through the gates just as another shower of bullets came from the Indians. Then the Indians tried to break down the door of the fort, but their plans failed and soldiers from another fort came to the rescue of the handful of men so valiantly holding Fort Henry. But it was really Elizabeth Zane who had saved the day.

The Indians Saw Her, But They Did Not Shoot

The HANDY BOY AT HOME

BY CHARLES A. KING,
STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N.H.

IN-A-DOOR SWING

SOMETIMES a mere man wonders what mother does with a couple of lively youngsters during the stormy days of winter when they cannot get out of doors to play. Well, she wonders herself, and we feel sure that after brother "Handy Boy" or Daddy "Home Worker" has hung this swing in a convenient doorway some of her perplexities will be in a measure simplified. The eyes screwed in the door frame will be hardly noticeable when the swing has been removed.

In making the swing board ¾" x 3" x 15" use any easily worked wood for the weight of the child will not be likely to split it. Bore a ⅜" hole 1" from each edge in each corner; countersink or round their edges to prevent cutting the rope. Place stout screw eyes, say ¼" or 5/16" wire in the header of the door jamb about 16" apart as indicated. The rope should be half inch for that will fit the hand better than a smaller rope which might be strong enough. Each rope for an ordinary doorway should be about nine feet long to allow for the sling at A and for the knots. At B is shown the method of tying a bowline, which will not slip, and at C we must tie two half hitches to a stout harness snap. Pass the ends of the ropes through the holes in the seat and tie the slings, then the other ends to the snaps, being careful to make both ropes the same length. Small adjustments in height may be made by gluing a wedge between the seat and the rope as at D.

If preferred, each end of a rope about fourteen feet long may be tied to a snap after being passed through holes in the middle of the board and 1" from each end. The seat may then be easily leveled in length, but it will not rest level in width, hence a child may slip off easily. The swing may be removed and rehung in a few seconds.

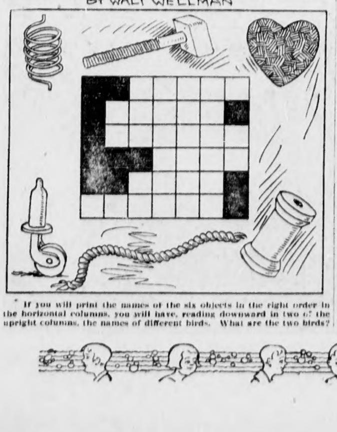
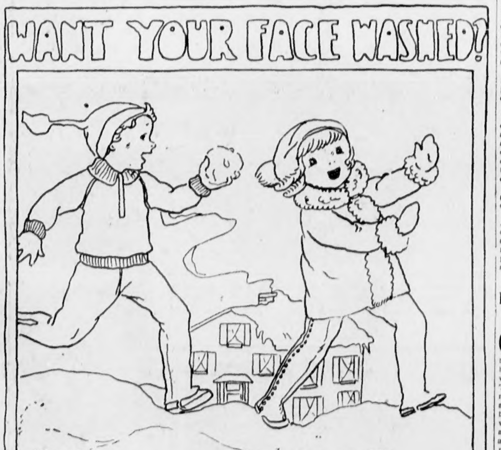
TWO BIRDS

BY WALT WELLMAN



If you will print the names of the six objects in the right order in the horizontal columns, you will have, reading downward in two of the upright columns, the names of different birds. What are the two birds?



WANT YOUR FACE WASHED?

(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

YELLOW-haired Susie May and BROWN-haired Teddy are playing in the snow.

"Want your face washed?" cries Teddy, chasing Susie May with a big piece of snow. Teddy wears a dark GREEN suit with ORANGE (use RED and YELLOW mixed) color, collar, cuffs and belt band. His cap is ORANGE color, too, with a GREEN tassel at the point.

"Ho, ho! You can't catch me!" cries Susie May, racing off. Susie May wears a RED coat trimmed with GRAY (use BLACK lightly) curly fur. Her cap is RED with a GRAY pom-pom on the top. Her leggings are TAN (use BROWN and YELLOW mixed), and so are her shoes. Teddy wears BROWN shoes.

The house is YELLOW with GREEN shutters and a RED chimney. The roof is covered with snow and there is a thin whisp of GRAY smoke. The sky is BLUE and the snow is White.

Both children have PINK (use RED lightly) cheeks.

Teddy has GREEN gloves and Susie May wears RED mittens.

Paint the border of this picture RED and the lettering GREEN.

The Wonder-Town

THERE is, oh yes, a wonder-town
For every child, with many a clown,
And great processions in the street
For wondering boys and girls to meet.

Just like a circus, something new
And wonderful pops into view
'Most every moment as you go
Past stores and houses, row on row.

The stores! What side-shows full of things
That run on wheels or fly on wings!
And dolls from many a far-off land
That walk and talk at your command.

This wonder-town is your own town
Where you are trotting up and down
With dad or mother every day,
And where you study and you play.

Just keep your big eyes open wide—
Processions pass on every side,
With funny men that make you grin
And shiny cars that raise a din.

Don't dream of wonder-towns away
In fairy countries always gay,
Because you're living now in one
That's full of wonders and of fun.

Can you find the fish to rhyme, with the last word of each first line?

Is quite as large as any ——.

FRUIT CUP

This time of year the wise cook provides the family with as much fruit as possible. Fruit salad, fruit desserts, one or the other, should be served every day. A simple dessert is a plain fruit cup which though easy to make and serve is always excellent to eat.

Dice enough canned fruit to make two cupfuls. For this use peaches, apricots, pears, pineapple or any desired fruit.

Dice enough fresh fruit to make 1 cupful. For this use apples, oranges, bananas, grape fruit or any desired fresh fruit. If necessary to fill out the right amount or to make variety a few prunes, dates or figs may be included, but this sort should not be more than one-quarter of the whole amount.

Mix the two sorts of fruits together and add the juice from the canned fruit.

Serve in small sherbert glasses. A garnish of a bright red or green cherry, or a bit of bright jelly is an attractive addition. Notice that no sugar is called for. It is important that this dish be not too sweet.

Serve with a cookie or wafer.

For Dickens' Birthday

Born February 7, 1812
Died June 9, 1870

EVERYWHERE the lovers of Charles Dickens abound and what could be more fitting than for these book lovers to celebrate the birthday of the author who was born on February 7. The guests should come dressed to represent some Dickens character and this should not be hard, as the boys and girls and men and women in Charles Dickens' books are so very distinctive. Little Nell and her Grandfather make a quaint pair. David Copperfield and little Emily are easily recognizable, as are Oliver Twist, Paul Dombey and a score of others. After the guests are all assembled have a guessing contest to see who can guess the most number of characters represented. An impromptu game is "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works," which every one will enjoy because everybody likes to act and give tableaux. A fitting way to close such a Dickens' evening is to have the host or hostess read a selection or a favorite passage from one of Dickens' stories.

Such a party will be enjoyed by everyone and will mark fittingly the anniversary of the novelist's birth.

The Sloth

IN the great, gloomy forests of South America are many strange animals and birds, but none are stranger than the curious animal called a sloth.

If you will look in your dictionary, you will find that the word sloth, or slothful, means indolent, lazy, slow and sluggish, and the animal of that name, is all of these at once—and more too. It is about the slowest thing there is, except maybe molasses on a cold morning, or a cow getting out of the way of a car. The sloth spends most of its time hanging upside down from the limbs of trees, probably because it finds that easier than standing up. It has long, crooked claws that it hooks over the limbs, leaving its shaggy body to hang down as shapeless as a sack half full of potatoes. It even eats and sleeps in this unnatural position, and it is never known to lie down comfortably like other animals.

If a sloth did not have to move about occasionally in search of food, I suppose it would hang in one place all its life, and be thankful. When hunger compels it to travel along a branch for a meal of leaves or bark, the painful journey is accomplished by slowly moving one foot at a time, and carefully unhooking and hooking its claws to the bough.

And the strange part of it is, their legs never seem to feel the dead weight of the body that they have to support. If they are slow motioned when up in trees, they are even slower when on the ground; their legs are not made for walking, so they lie flat on the stomach, and pull themselves along, an inch at a time by hooking their claws in the ground in front as far as they can reach.

They never take a walk just for exercise, or for the pleasure they get out of it; and as far as anybody knows they have never been arrested for speeding. Sometimes it takes them several days to go a short distance between two trees—a distance that a squirrel could cover in a half dozen jumps. While pulling itself along on the grass, it moans and groans as if every movement was agony, and it is only when once more hanging, upside down from a limb that it seems to be satisfied and at ease.

It never changes trees as long as there is a particle of bark or a single leaf to feed on; and when it gets through with a tree, it is as bare of bark and foliage as a barbed wire fence, and it looks as if it might have been dead for years.

It is a fortunate thing that there are so many more trees than sloths in the country where they make their homes, for if there were not, in a few years there would be no trees at all, as the sloths would kill them all. When a sloth has managed to pull itself up in a tree—that tree is doomed.

Its body is covered with long, straggling hair that hangs down too, and at a little distance, one would never take it for a live animal, but would naturally suppose it was a bunch of dry and withered moss hanging from the limb. And to make it look even more like moss, the coarse hair takes on a greenish tinge that matches the color of the foliage and the moss that grows on trees.

The sloth has very few teeth, and the few it has, are small and short, but it is too lazy to do much chewing any way, so it probably has all it needs.

It is a wise provision of nature that the sloth can get sufficient water by licking the moisture that gathers on the leaves at night, for if it had to let itself gingerly down the tree, and then travel inch by inch over the grass, in search for water, it would likely perish from thirst before it found any.

The animal has so little use for separate toes that all four of them are enclosed in a fold of skin, that looks much like a finger-less glove. This topsy-turvy creature, when it comes to personal appearance, has nothing to brag of; in the first place, its hair hangs the wrong way; it is large-eyed, snub nosed, and earless, and its air of sad resignation never relaxes.

It looks as if it had lost its last friend, and never expects to have another. Its countenance, if it can be said to have a countenance, expresses nothing but dejection and untold misery; and take it altogether, it is about the saddest object in nature.

The Sloth Is As Shapeless As A Bag Of Potatoes
